15 Die as Airliner From D. C. Hits House

2 Children Are Victims As Accident Fires Home

No Washingtonians In Minneapolis Crash Although Flight Originated Here

Minneapolis, March 7 (AP).—A Northwest Airlines plane trying for a landing in a roaring March storm crashed into a house in the residential section here tonight and exploded.

Firemen said at least 15 were killed.

The explosion killed two children watching television in the home of Franklin Doughty and firemen said there would be "no survivors" from the flaming ship.

The plane was identified as a Martin 2-0-2 bound from Washington to Minneapolis and thence to Seattle.

It carried 10 passengers and a crew of three.

The Washington office of the airline said there were no Washington passengers aboard the plane when it crashed. The office said the most Western point to which District passengers were booked was Madison, Wis., two stops before Minneapolis.

The plane, bucking high winds and a snow storm, plummeted into a quiet residential section at Emerson ave. south and Minnehaha parkway. Witnesses said a wing fell near a water tower some eight blocks from the scene.

The wreckage caught fire as the gasoline tanks exploded. The Doughty home was immediately engulfed in flames which made a veritable pyre of the downed ship.

Police said two of five members of the Doughty family were killed and the other three seriously injured. The big plane struck their home without warning as they watched a television program.

Firemen said identified victims were Janet Doughty, 10, and her 8-year-old brother Tommy. Mr. and Mrs. Doughty and a 15-year-old daughter, Diane, were taken to a hospital in critical condition.

R. E. Stelzig, chief flight superintendent for Northwest Airlines, said the ship had stopped at Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit and Madison, Wis., after leaving Washington. It had been scheduled to stop at Rochester, Minn., but was routed into Minneapolis because of the heavy weather.

Civil Aeronautics radio control tower operators said the ship was seeking to make the Minneapolis landing on instruments through the swirling snow. It had failed on one approach and was attempting a second.

First firemen at the scene found the body of a man lying in the street a block from the crash. They first thought he was a victim of the explosion, which was heard in varying degree across the entire Minneapolis south side.

Investigation, however, disclosed he was J. Cameron Jenkins, about 60, an insurance man who lived near the scene. He had collapsed of a heart attack.

The airline identified the crew as Capt. Don Jones, pilot; William McGinn, copilot, and Mary Alice Kennedy, stewardess. All are residents of Minneapolis.

900 Professors Defy Oath Edict

Berkeley, Calif., March 7 (AP).—University of California professors voted 900-0 tonight to refuse to sign a non-Communist oath imposed by the board of regents.

In other actions they took a firm stand against Communists in the university; expressed willingness to accept the standard oath of allegiance taken by State and national and officials; and offered a substitute for the regents' oath.

Adm. Joel Boone Loses Post; Hit Johnson Hospital Order

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Rear Admiral Joel T. Boone, top-ranking uniformed official of the Defense Department's Medical Services Division, who has criticized Secretary Louis Johnson's hospital economy program, has been removed from his post.

This was announced last night following Boone's testimony before a congressional subcommittee that the proposed closing of Army and Navy hospitals was "very short-sighted."

The department said Boone was notified February 28 that he was being relieved of his job and that his future assignment was up to the Navy.

While no reason was given for the transfer, the admiral's testimony yesterday made it plain that he has opposed closing the hospitals.

Boone, who served as personal physician to Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, could not be reached for comment. The 60-year-old Navy doctor received the Congressional Medal of Honor and other awards for heroism in action with the Marines in France in 1918.

Called before a House Armed Services Subcommittee investigating Johnson's order closing five general hospitals and eliminating services at others, Boone said he was testifying reluctantly and in some embarrassment. He emphasized he was appearing at the group's direction.

But he pulled no punches in his criticism of the plan. It was

Aid to Church Schools Loses In House Unit

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The hard-pressed House Labor Committee yesterday rejected a proposal for Federal aid to parochial and private schols, and today will vote on a proposal to prohibit any such aid.

The committee met its first test on the burning religious controversy by rejecting 16 to 9 an amendment by Representative John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.), which would have given Federal funds for bus transportation to parochial and private schools even in those states whose constitutions forbid the use of state funds for that purpose.

Amendment UP Today

A diametrically opposed amendment introduced by Representative Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.) limiting the use of federal funds to public elementary and secondary schools only comes up for a vote today. Committee members predicted that this will also be defeated.

Before the committee votes on the Jacobs amendment, it will vote on what is in effect a substitute for the Senate-passed federal aid to education bill. This measure, introduced by Representative Thomas H. Burke (D., O.) would earmark approximately 70 percent of the funds carried in the bill for the payment of salaries to teachers. Defeat was also foreseen for this measure.

Doubts were being widely expressed that the committee, in view of the grave differences of opinion among its members, would report out any bill at all.

Some members, however, believed it possible that the committee, slated to finish its work this week, may wind up with a bill allowing funds for school construction only.

Aid Without Control

Although the religious controversy has been most emphasized in the committee struggles with the bill, many committee members felt that it comes second to the difficulty of writing any measure which will insure Federal aid to schools without the danger of Federal controls.

Much of the opposition to any widespread measure springs primarily from the fear, members say, that the principle of "he who pays the piper calls the tune," will hold in a situation where the Fed-

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett yesterday won assurance from the House District Crime Inquiry Committee of a hands-off policy in the aftermath of the flareup started by Precinct Capt. Anthony Richitt.

Barrett and Daniel B. Maher, Special Assistant District Corporation Counsel, who is functioning as the police department's attorney, met with Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) in the latter's office. Barrett was accompanied by his aide, Sergt. Louis Peters.

Davis, chairman of the crime inquiry group, announced after the session:

50 Signatures More For Rule Bill Vote

Exactly 50 more signatures are needed to bring the Senate-approved Kefauver home rule bill to the House floor for a vote, the measure's supporters said yesterday.

Signature number 168—that of Representative Nelson (R., Maine)—was added yesterday, the House member said. A total of 218, an absolute majority of the House, is necessary to bring the bill out over the pigeonholing action of the House District Committee.

Roland Robbins Struck by Car, Critically Hurt

Roland S. Robbins, 70-year-old manager of the Trans-Lux Theater, was critically injured last night when struck by a car as he crossed Piney Branch rd. at Sheridan st. nw.

Robbins, of 6215 14th st. nw., was taken to Garfield Hospital with a compound fracture of the left leg, a possible skull fracture, and lacerations of the head and face.

Police said the driver of the car was Dr. C. H. Wolohon, 55, of 500 Underwood st. nw. Dr. Wolohon told police he did not see anyone at the intersection.

Red Cross Fund Drive Lags; Leaders Urge Wider Coverage

Worried about a lagging campaign, District Red Cross officials yesterday appealed for intensified effort by their fund workers.

Their concern was expressed when, at the second report luncheon, workers brought campaign totals so far subscribed up to only 15 percent of the $1,039,000 drive quota.

General campaign chairman Daniel W. Bell warned workers that collections are lagging 8 percent behind last year's totals for this time. Last year, at the comparable campaign report, workers had collected 22 percent of a $924,000 goal.

Total collections reported at yesterday's luncheon were $69,813.18, bringing the campaign total so far to $148,988.97.

At the luncheon, held in the United States Chamber of Commerce Hall of Flags, Bell urged much broader coverage for the campaign. Later he asked keymen and chairmen to shoot for 50 percent of the campaign quota by Friday, next report meeting.

C. H. Johnson, chairman of the general business division of the campaign, asked large business firms in the Washington area which have not yet begun their solicitation to do so at once. He pointed out that information, materials and supplies may be obtained by phoning Executive 7383.

Johnson also urged those who have completed solicitation to phone the Executive number so that the Red Cross motor service may call for finished reports.

Next report meeting in the drive will be held Friday at 12:30 in the chamber's Hall of Flags. Principal speaker will be Jennings Randolph, assistant to the president of Capital Airlines. The luncheon will be given on "District of Columbia Day" in the drive.

Ex-Sheriff Indicted in Tax Evasion

The chief deputy sheriff of Prince Georges County, R. Earle Sheriff, was indicted yesterday for failing to pay income taxes on $34,998.96 received from 1943 through 1946.

A Federal grand jury in Baltimore charged Sheriff with attempting to evade payment of $10,430.76 in income taxes during the four years he was the county sheriff.

The Government's action against Sheriff was first reported exclusively in The Washington Post in Drew Pearson's column on October 26, 1949.

Sheriff resigned from his post at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, four hours before he was indicted.

He refused to answer any questions about whether he did receive the unreported $34,998.96, and if so, from what source.

As sheriff, Sheriff received a salary of $5400 a year, from which he was required to pay the salary of a clerk-stenographer.

Appointed In 1939

The 55-year-old sheriff, who lives in Landover, Md., was appointed deputy sheriff in 1939. He was elected sheriff in 1942 and resigned in December, 1946. He was appointed deputy sheriff again in January, 1947.

The indictment charged that Sheriff actually received $43,462.62 during 1943, 1944, 1945 and 1946, but reported a net income of only $8463.66.

The grand jury charged that Sheriff should have paid income taxes of $11,349.92, instead of the $919.16 the indictment said he did pay. He was charged with a total evasion of $10,430.76.

Prince Georges County Sheriff T. Ward Martin said his chief deputy told him Monday night that he would resign, and did resign early yesterday morning, effective immediately.

Martin said Sheriff's successor as chief deputy sheriff was sworn in at 3 p. m. yesterday. The new chief deputy is R. C. Meredith, Friendly, Md., a 60-year-old railroad clerk, who retired from his job at Union Station on February 28. A former Hyattsville councilman, Meredith worked at the Washington Terminal for more than 30 years.

Gave No Reason

Martin said Sheriff gave him no reason for resigning, and Martin refused to comment on Sheriff's indictment. States Attorney A. Gwinn Bowie also refused to comment.

Robert W. McCullough, attorney for Sheriff, said he had no comment to make on the indictment "at present." Sheriff has been connected with the sheriff's office for 12 years. He is the son of Prince Georges County's first trial magistrate, the late J. Chew Sheriff. He is married and has two children.

The indictment charges that in

Phony Colonel Called 'Speedy' Slowed to Dead Stop by FBI

Harold Lloyd Joyce is a fast man with a checkbook, a fast man in a car, and a fast man with the ladies.

And he's so fast on roller skates they used to call him "Speedy." But he wasn't fast enough to get away from the FBI.

Joyce, 24-year-old former convict, who is wanted in Washington and other cities on a variety of State and Federal charges, was picked up in Chicago by the FBI Saturday night.

The G-Men closed in on Joyce just as he was preparing to shoot down a "friend."

At his arraignment Monday, the United States Commissioner in Chicago asked Joyce:

"What do you carry a gun for?"

"To take care of birds like you," snarled the squat, swarthy tough guy.

Joyce had two prison terms behind him before he started a new flight of crime last December.

This is the way the FBI reconstructs it:

On December 5, Joyce cashed $4000 worth of "rubber" checks in Hammond, Ind., his home town, and skipped.

A few days later he turned up in Oak Park, Ill., where he bought a Lincoln convertible coupe with a small down payment.

He blew out of Oak Park in his fancy hack and headed East.

When next seen he was making a splash in Washington in the uniform of an Air Force colonel.

He so impressed young Sally Peacock, a Wac stationed at the South Post of Fort Myer, that she married him December 11 at Dillon, S. C.

The following day, Joyce, posing as "Col. Larry Gaylord Hill," paid

Bernhard Puts Strain On Protocol

By Bill Brinkley

Bernhard of the Netherlands, hereby dubbed The Prankish Prince, set his plane down at National Airport 30 minutes ahead of schedule yesterday.

His Royal Highness thus handed Washington protocol one of its severest jolts in memory.

What is more, he seemed to enjoy doing it—if a certain smile and mischievous eyes mean with royalty what they do with commoners.

It was a rare scene, with Stanley Woodward, State Department chief of protocol and not the man to be accused lightly of lese majeste, dashing up the stairs exclaiming "First time I've ever been . . ."

The German-born prince is the husband of Queen Juliana of The Netherlands and one of only two or three prince consorts in the entire world.

The famous Washington welcome for visiting royalty, with honor guard, brass by the ton and such, was to be tendered him on his scheduled arrival at 5:45 p. m.

Shortly after five, Netherlands Ambassador E. N. van Kleffens, only member of the greeting party on hand, had been telling a reporter the story about the Belgian

AF Revamps Its Strategic Air Command

The Air Force yesterday announced a revamping of its Strategic Air Command, aimed at readying the Nation's atomic bomb carriers for quicker action in an emergency.

Lieut. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, commander of "SAC," reshuffled the three air forces making up his command, to make each a "balanced force" and based relatively close together in the same section of the country.

Heretofore, all of SAC's strategic reconnaissance planes have been in Maj. Gen. Joseph H. (Hamp) Atkinson's Second Air Force, with headquarters at Barksdale AF Base, La. Only one of the long-range reconnaissance groups, however, was at Barksdale, with the other two at Fairfield-Suisin AF Base, Calif.

Similarly, Maj. Gen. Emmett (Rosie) O'Donnell's Fifteenth Air Force and Maj. Gen. Roger M. Ramey's Eighth Air Force have been scattered all over the United States.

The new setup will give O'Donnell command of all SAC forces and bases in Western United States, with headquarters at March AF Base, Calif. Ramey's headquarters at Fort Worth, Tex., will have control of SAC units in the central United States, and Atkinson those in the East.

Each will maintain both bomber and reconnaissance forces, en-

Unspent Funds Could Be Used For Asiatic Aid, Acheson Says

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson suggested yesterday that Congress could, if it wished, extend substantial economic aid to southeast Asia without new appropriations.

His proposed method was to authorize using the 104 million dollars of unspent China-Formosa recovery funds in "the general area of China" in the coming fiscal year.

This would enable the Economic Cooperation Administration to continue its relief and recovery work on the Nationalist island of Formosa, now proceeding at a rate of a little under two million dollars a month.

It would also provide a balance of about 80 million dollars to be spent in Indo-China, Siam and Burma if the Administration decides to do so. In addition, President Truman still has at his disposal a 75-million-dollar fund for military assistance "in the general area of China," which includes southeast Asia.

"We are not in a position to come up with a specific program for southeast Asia," Secretary Acheson told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, "although we may be able to do that later.

"But if the committee feels so disposed it could extend the existing China act through the 1951 fiscal year and broaden it to include the non-Communist nations

Miss Coplon, Gubitchev Guilty; Jailed Until Sentence Thursday

New York, March 7 (AP).—Judith Coplon and her glum Russian former friend, Valentin A. Gubitchev, were convicted today of plotting to spy for the Soviet Union at the height of the cold war.

The Government hailed the verdict as a warning on subversive activities. Both defendants, who had been free in bail, were jailed to await sentencing Thursday at 10:30 a. m.

Miss Coplon, 28, formerly a $4479-a-year political analyst for the Justice Department, faces up to 25 years in prison plus a $10,000 fine. This is in addition to a 40-months-to-10-years sentence she received after a previous spy conviction in Washington.

The former Government girl has appealed to a Federal Court of Appeals in Washington against her first conviction last July. The appeal, now pending, charges 26 errors occurred during Federal Judge Albert Reeves' handling of the original 10-week trial.

Gubitchev, 33, an engineer who still holds the rank of third secretary of the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Affairs, can get up to 15 years and $20,000 in fines. He is the first Russian convicted of spying in this country since the cold war began.

Lawyers for both defendants said the convictions will be appealed.

A Federal court jury of six men and six housewives returned the verdict at 11:45 a. m. after failing to reach agreement last night. The jury had been out since 4:34 p. m. yesterday.

Brooklyn-born Miss Coplon, an honor graduate of Barnard College here, paled slightly but showed no other sign of emotion. Only a few hours before she had been bright-eyed and cheerful.

Connecticut Ave. Goes Ahead With Its Easter Parade

Washington will have an Easter parade after all.

The Connecticut Avenue Association last night gave parade plans the green light, after the businessmen received a letter from District Commissioners promising that Dupont Circle would be open to surface traffic on April 7, two days before Easter Sunday.

In a letter to Horace J. Meyers, association president, the Commissioners said only strikes or bad weather would interfere with the completion date.

At a special meeting last night, the association authorized Alfred Pasternak, chairman of the Easter parade committee, to proceed with plans for April 9.

The parade will start after church services on Easter Sunday. Special prizes will be awarded to the best dressed man, woman, and family, Meyers said.

'Hill' Probers Split on Rise In Steel Prices

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Republicans and Democrats on the Joint Congressional Economic Committee split sharply down party lines yesterday on a report concerning this year's rise in steel prices.

Republicans refused to sign a majority report that, by implication at least, condemned the industry's action.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), dominant Republican figure in the congressional economic field, said the Democratic draft "smears the steel industry" and contains recommendations "looking toward price-fixing."

Committee Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), however, said there is nothing in the report justifying such an inference. Taking the offensive himself, O'Mahoney charged to reporters that the facts in the report are "so unassailable" that he could conclude only that "our (Republican) friends are engaged in the diversionary tactic of talking about imaginary inferences."

The report, it was learned, contains four recommendations, the most controversial of which is one proposing a study of the feasibility of what amounts to a "cooling-off period" before new steel prices go into effect.

This recommendation follows the lines, or at least the philosophy, of a bill introduced by O'Mahoney in July, 1948. It provides that no industry in which a large percentage of the business is concentrated in a few hands can change prices without first submitting a notice of intent to several Government agencies.

One of them, the Federal Trade Commission, would hold public hearings on the matter and make recommendations to Congress for action, if any was considered necessary.

Under this bill, and presumably the recommendation in the committee report, no Government

Hoover, Warren Clash on GAO As Senate Hearings Are Ended

A battle between former President Herbert Hoover and Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren over a proposal to revamp the Government's accounting system flared open before a Senate committee yesterday.

Mr. Hoover, who headed President Truman's bi-partisan commission on reorganization of government departments, indorsed the basic points of a bill introduced by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, jr., (R., Wisc.) to set up an accountant general within the Department of the Treasury.

Mr. Hoover told the committee the new system of accounting could lop 18,000 employes off the Government payroll. Warren strenuously objected. He told the Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures:

"Mr. Hoover is merely renewing and continuing his assaults on the General Accounting Office. In so doing, he fails to take into account all that has happened in the last 18 years, especially the last nine years."

After Warren's testimony, hearings on the McCarthy bill were closed, with every apparent indication that the Senate group, following long congressional precedent, will protect the interests of the GAO, an instrumentality of its own creation.

Mr. Hoover, in a prepared statement, spoke of the "universal condemnation" of the present system of accounting in the executive branch of the Government. He said that under present laws that accounting is under control of the GAO.

"There is a host of evidence that the accounting system is inefficient and wasteful, fails to establish

Attlee Faces Strength Test Thursday on Steel Issue

Postponement Bid Rejected; Churchill Warns of Further Pound Devaluation

London, March 7 (AP).—Winston Churchill gave the Labor government its choice today: Postpone state ownership of the iron and steel industry or face a running battle in Commons.

The government, resting on a hair-line majority of 7 seats out of 625, refused the truce. Contrary to early predictions of a breathing spell after the February 23 election, the first big skirmish is scheduled for Thursday.

Churchill, the Conservative leader, proposed in his first speech in the new Parliament that nationalization of iron and steel, already enacted into law, be delayed until at least nine months "after the next national election"—whenever that may be.

'Quaint Idea' to Morrison

Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison rejected this immediately as "a quaint idea."

Unless there is a change in the planned procedure in the next 48 hours, this means the issue will come to a vote Thursday on a Conservative motion expressing regret that the King's speech made no mention of iron and steel. The motion is in the form of an amendment to a government resolution approving the speech from the throne. The traditional speech, read by King George at the opening of Parliament, was written by the government as an outline of its policy.

If the Labor government fails to win, tradition would call for it to resign and appeal to the country in a new election.

It appeared likely, however, that the Conservatives would get no help from the Liberals in this first test of strength and that Labor would win if it is able to muster its full voting power.

Churchill Irks Liberals

Discussing the Liberal Party, Churchill said:

"It has perhaps been readily assumed that the nine gentlemen (the Liberal members) below the gangway on this side will have in this Parliament a position of undue influence. I hope the House of Commons is not going to allow itself to be dominated or let its fate and future be decided by any small body of members."

He deplored the practice in some parliaments in which small parties can "sway the course of considerable events."

Clement Davies, leader of the nine Liberals, was irked at the Churchill attack on his small band. He told the House he saw no purpose in Churchill's resolution, and that another election within three or four months was "unthinkable." This may mean the Liberals will abstain, though they too oppose Labor's nationalization policy.

As the law nationalizing iron and Asoka got a black eye on the rough train trip from Mysore to Delhi.

Hainan Island Reported Invaded By Chinese Reds

Taipei, Formosa, March 7 (AP).—A force of [illegible]0 Chinese Communist troops today was said to have landed on Hainan, second largest island left to the Nationalists.

Fighting was raging on the northwestern corner of the island, said crew members of one of Claire L. Chennault's airline planes. They brought the report to Formosa from Hainan.

The report was too fragmentary to tell whether this was the start of the long-expected invasion of the big island off the south coast of China. It could be only a raid to test Hainan's defenses.

Lewis Seeks CIO Help For 'Mutual Aid Fund'

John L. Lewis urged the CIO steelworkers today to join his United Mine Workers in setting up a huge "mutual aid fund" to be used by the two unions in their wage battles with the "financial interests."

He made the proposal to Philip Murray, head of the steelworkers union and the national CIO, in a letter in which he also accused industry of attempted union busting.

It was the second time in two days that Lewis, fresh from his victory in the soft coal strike, made an offer of assistance to a CIO union. Monday he offered a one-million-dollar loan to the United Auto Workers (CIO) for use in its wage fight with the Chrysler Corp. and General Motors.

Lewis wrote Murray, his former friend and protege in the CIO, to return a $500,000 check the steelworkers gave the UMW during the soft coal strike. He noted that the UMW was barred by a court order from passing it on to the miners.

He offered "to negotiate with the United Steelworkers of America a mutual aid pact for common defense, wherein the assets of both organizations, or a stipulated part thereof, would be made available, each to the other, under emergent conditions."

Lewis first advanced his suggestion for a huge interunion strike fund last fall when Murray's union was on strike against the steel companies. He proposed to AFL President William Green that the UMW and the nine largest AFL unions each contribute $250,000 a week to help the steel workers. But Green cold-shouldered the idea.

Lewis, who now is engaged in contract negotiations with hard coal operators, reminded Murray that the UMW also has its troubles with the steel companies since they own the so-called "captive" soft coal mines.

"During recent months," he wrote, "each of our great unions has been engaged in major conflict with the most powerful groups of financial interests in America.

"The idea seems increasingly prevalent in industrial and financial circles that our great industrial unions should be attacked and crippled, one by one.

"This idea should be knocked in the head."

Lewis made much the same statement in offering the loan to the auto workers union. He wrote President Walter P. Reuther that the two unions were, in effect, fighting the same foe—"the financial group which dominates the automotive industry."

Lewis asked Murray to name a committee to meet with the UMW to negotiate a mutual aid pact.

To Report in Year

Truman Asks Coal Study Commission

President Truman sent Congress his plan yesterday for a long-range study of the coal industry which he has called "sick" in both its general economy and its labor relations.

At the same time, the President put it on record that he considers the "emergency" over, now that a new contract has brought peace in the soft-coal diggings, and no longer wants authority to seize the mines. He first advanced the study commission idea last Friday in his message to Congress asking seizure authority, only a few hours before John L. Lewis and the coal operators came to terms.

Yesterday, Mr. Truman wrote to Vice President Barkley, presiding officer of the Senate, and Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) of the House, that "it is not necessary for the Congress to give further consideration" to seizure at this time. Some lawmakers have urged that standby legislation be passed, ready for any future need.

Sees Study Still Needed

With regard to his other proposal, the President wrote:

"The end of the coal strike has in no way diminished the need for a long-range study of the coal industry with the view of finding and putting into effect the best solutions for its problems from the standpoint of the miners, the operators and, above all, the national interest."

He sent along the draft of a bill to authorize the study by a commission which would report within a year. The commission would have nine members—two each from the House and Senate and five named by the President, of whom one would be from Government and the other four would represent the public. The President would name one of the public representatives as chairman.

The proposition received a generally warm welcome at the Capitol but Senator Taft (R., Ohio) was a notable holdout from that welcome. Taft's coolness to the idea lined him up with George H. Love, leading spokesman for the soft-coal operators, and—an unusual position for Taft—with the stand reportedly taken by Lewis.

The Ohio Senator told reporters he has some doubts about the wisdom of setting up such a commission as the President proposed. Friends said Taft fears that if such a commission were dominated by Administration members it might give impetus to demands from some persons for nationalization of the coal mines.

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Senate Interior Committee, said the committee will hold hearings on the proposal "as soon as possible." He indicated that might be in a week or two.

agency would have power to set industrial prices; only the force of public opinion and hearing would be brought to bear.

Delay Faces Labor Demands

It is argued that such a cooling-off period applies to the steel industry in respect to the principal commodity it buys, i.e. labor. There the industry has the power, through the Taft-Hartley Act, to force a cooling-off period before labor can obtain a wage increase. The same process, Democratic members of the committee assert, ought to apply to the steel industry in respect to the commodity it sells.

Other recommendations in the majority report call for studies of steel costs and studies of what measures are possible to bring more competition in the industry.

A fourth recommendation proposes a study of the possibility of subjecting the steel industry to Federal regulation, if free competition in the industry is found to be impossible of attainment.

Democratic committee members assert the proposal to regulate the steel industry is less radical than it might appear. They point out just such a recommendation was made by none other than Judge Elbert H. Gary, first chairman of U. S. Steel Corp. They said Gary advocated control of the steel industry, as if it were a public utility, in Congressional hearings in 1911.

The body of the majority report, citnig the facts of the steel price rise, indicates the increase was unwarranted, since prices were already too high.

It also states bluntly that the committee could not get the facts it wanted from the industry, and that some smaller members of the industry were "afraid" to send representatives to testify to the committee.

Senator Taft predicted that the Republicans would write their own minority report. Some sources suggested there were differences of opinion in the Republican ranks and that two or three, not just one, minority report would emerge.

The issuance of all the reports is expected in about ten days.

Night Schools Reopening In District

District night schools, closed to 7500 students for two weeks by the coal shortage, will reopen tonight, Supt. Hobart M. Corning announced yesterday.

But other coal-using schools will remain closed to night activities unless groups can get along with heat left over from day sessions, Corning said. Only schools where night classes are held will be heated for the present.

Dealers here are still rationing coal under supervision of the Fuel Coordination Committee. In nearby areas most dealers were scraping the bottoms of their bins. But all felt they could get through this week somehow, and were confident that "next week there'll be plenty of coal."

Roland M. Brennan, District purchasing officer, said there's an adequate supply in sight for all District institutions. Government coal yards still have a two-week supply, he reported. As of Monday, District buildings had 2200 tons—more than a week's supply—in their own bins, he added.

In both Alexandria and Fairfax County, school officials said they have enough coal on hand to last out the winter.

Francis F. Fannon, Alexandria dealer, said he had only about 10 tons of run-of-mine coal in his bins. He expects a carload in Saturday. Most other dealers seemed about similarly fixed.

In Montgomery County, where the board of education has forbidden night use of schools since March 1, school officials said they hope to remove the ban by March 20.

Ex-President Calls for 'Vast Reform . . .'

proper responsibility of officials and is unable to present the full picture to the Congress."

Replying, Warren said Mr. Hoover issued an executive reorganization order in 1932 which would "practically destroy the GAO," and that Congress rejected it after Mr. Hoover's own director of the budget had advised against the order.

Roosevelt Also Repulsed

President Roosevelt also tried to "destroy the GAO," Warren said, and "was repulsed." Warren said President Roosevelt declared he had given up the fight to destroy the GAO when he (Warren) left Congress to become Comptroller General.

In the last nine years, Warren said, the GAO has paid back to the Treasury 650 million dollars illegally or erroneously paid out. That sum, he declared, is three times what it has cost to operate the agency.

"I can assure the committee," he declared, "that the GAO stands as the last great bulwark protecting the American taxpayer against erroneous and illegal payments of the public substance."

Mr. Hoover told the committee the fact that the problems of Government accounting have not been solved in 25 years seems to indicate that voluntary action is not sufficient.

Authority With Responsibility

If the Congress, he said, expects responsibility from the executive branch it should give it the authority to carry out those responsibilities. Quoting from a task force report on this subject, Mr. Hoover said:

"Management must be accountable for its own performance. Since a full and proper accounting cannot possibly be made by anyone else, the accountability of a management must be commensurate with its responsibility and authority."

Mr. Hoover said this was "one of the most difficult tasks ever laid before Congress.

In general, Mr. Hoover said, "astonishing progress has been made up to date" in Government reorganization.

The Gallup Poll

Voters Overwhelmingly Back Hoover Commission Report

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 7.—The Hoover commission report has overwhelming support from U. S. voters who have heard about it.

By a vote of 13-to-1 they are in favor of having Congress put into effect the main recommendations of the Hoover commission for reorganizing the Federal Government.

However, only one-third of the voters questioned know about the report, a coast-to-coast survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion finds.

Because of the complex nature of the Hoover report, the institute in conducting its survey on the subject made use of what is known as the "filter" technique. Two preliminary questions were put to each voter to determine how well informed he was on the subject.

The questions were, "Have you heard or read anything about the Herbert Hoover commission report?" and "What is your understanding of the purpose of the Hoover commission?"

It was found that 39 percent had heard or read something about the report, while 61 percent said they had not. Of the 39 percent, a total of 31 percent indicated, in answer to the second question, a clear understanding of the purpose of the commission — namely, reorganization of the executive branch in order to eliminate waste, duplication of functions and inefficiency.

These voters were then asked the following question:

"Would you like to see Congress carry out the main suggestions of the Hoover Commission's Report, or not?"

The vote follows:

Yes	25%
No	2
No opinion	4
	31%
Not informed about report	69
	100%

Here is the vote by degree of education:

	College	High Sch'l	Grade Sch'l
Favor	56%	27%	15%
Oppose	2	3	1
No opinion	7	5	2
	65%	35%	18%
Not informed about report	35%	65%	82%

Aid to Church Schools Loses

eral Government hands over any money for education.

A bill limiting the use of funds to school construction only yesterday was believed by several members to be the only possible compromise. It might remove the embattled House Labor group from its very uncomfortable dilemma because the construction measure could be tossed over to the Committee on Public Works.

Rejection of the Kennedy amendment brought this comment from the Massachusetts members:

"This definitely means that some of us are not going to be so strong for the bill.

"So far as I am concerned, I won't vote for the bill."

The issue came up as the House committee started rewriting a Senate-passed measure to provide 300 million dollars a year in Federal money to help States finance their schools.

The Senate measure says nothing about any restrictions—or lack of restrictions—on the use of the money for private and parochial schools. The omission would let the States use the money under their own rules, helping church schools if such schools get State help.

Kennedy's proposal was that the United States Commissioner of Education, in the case of States which forbid use of public funds for other than tax-supported schools, withhold that portion of the Federal money which otherwise would go into the transportation costs for public or parochial schools. The commissioner would be directed to pay the money, instead, directly to the contractor giving the bus service.

Committeemen reported that on the vote, Kennedy was backed by Chairman Lesinski (D., Mich.) and Representatives Kelley (D., Pa.), Burke (D., Ohio), Lucas (D., Tex.), Bailey (D., W. Va.), Irving (D., Wyo.), Morton (R., Ky.) and Brehm (R., Ohio).

The burden of argument for extending transportation aid to nonpublic schools has been carried by Catholic Church authorities. Their contention is that all children of school age are counted in computing a State's share of the funds. On that basis they hold that parochial schools are entitled to a share.

The opposing argument has been based on the theory of separation of church and State, and the contention that attendance at nonpublic schools is a matter of parents' choice for which the public has no financial responsibility.

Farm Agency Pressures Hit In Plan Report

The National Planning Association urged yesterday adoption of measures to keep Government farm agencies from being built into powerful political and pressure groups.

The association said many local leaders in the Agriculture Department's Production and Marketing Administration—and farmers who support them—are beginning to say that agriculture "is now at long last developing in the PMA" a group that can do for it what the unions have been doing for labor.

The PMA is the department agency—with its regional, State and county offices and farmer committees—which administers such important farm programs as price supports, production controls and some phases of the department's soil conservation program.

The association said that if the PMA should develop into a pressure group, "the defenders of a free society will need to stand up and fight domination by organized agriculture just as they must now frequently stand up and oppose domination by syndicated capital and syndicated labor."

The association—a non-profit, non-political organization of leaders in agriculture, business, labor and the professions—took its stand in a report on Federal-State-local relations in agriculture.

The report expressed concern that the "present overlapping and disjointedness of effort" of Government farm agencies and the "acute conflicts of power and jurisdiction may impair the effectiveness of farm programs and undermine their democratic vitality."

Prepared by Prof. John D. Black of Harvard University, the report said there are conflicts in the activities of such Federal agencies as the Agricultural Extension Service, the Production and Marketing Administration, and the Soil Conservation Service of the Agriculture Department; the reclamation service of the Interior Department and the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The report did not attempt to provide a specific solution or to say just which agricultural activities should be under Federal or State or local auspices.

Chamber Urges Vets To Back Hoover Plan

Herman W. Steinkraus, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, yesterday appealed to veterans to help eliminate "inefficiency and waste" from Federal veterans' aid programs.

Steinkraus, a decorated World War I veteran, sent a pamphlet and letter to all post commanders of veterans' organizations asking them to support plans to cut costs in the Government's hospitalization, insurance, home loan and other benefit programs.

He urged them to get behind the Hoover report for streamlining the Federal executive department. Adoption of the former President's recommendations, he said, would benefit veterans rather than deprive them of help.

Electoral Amendment Hearing Set Thursday

The House Rules Committee yesterday postponed until 10:30 a. m. Thursday further consideration of the Lodge-Gossett Constitutional amendment to change the method of electing the President.

At that time, Chairman Sabath indicated yesterday, opponents will be given a final opportunity to be heard on the Senate-approved measure. A vote may come at the close of the hearing.

House Votes Oleo Tax Repeal

Repeal of all Federal taxes on oleomargarine, which date back 64 years, was voted finally by the House yesterday, 262 to 106. Quick Senate approval is expected to send the legislation to the White House.

Dairy State members went down fighting to the last, lambasting what they called "the oleo trust."

They lost on all counts but one. They got into the compromise bill a provision that yellow oleomargarine must bear these identifications:

1. When served in public eating places the parties must be triangular in shape.

2. When sold in stores, there must be on the label of the package (A) the word "oleomargarine" or "margarine" in type as large as any lettering on the label, (B) a full statement of all the ingredients of the margarine, and (C) each part of the contents of the package must be in a wrapper which bears the word "oleomargarine" or "margarine" in type not smaller than 20 point (about ¼ inch high).

House Votes Hawaii Statehood

The House yesterday voted to make Hawaii the first off-shore State in the American Union.

The roll-call vote was 261 to 110 in favor of Hawaii's admission. The House approved statehood for Alaska—far removed from the other States, but on the North American mainland—by a vote of 186 to 146 last Friday.

It is up to the Senate now whether two more stars are to be added to the flag. President Truman is on record in favor of statehood for both territories—Hawaii with its 530,000 persons of diverse racial origin, Alaska with a bare 100,000.

Both statehood bills were promised consideration in the Senate Interior Committee at some indefinite date this session. But that was all that was promised.

The committee, headed by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), pigeonholed a similar Hawaii statehood bill two years ago. The Alaska bill never has been considered by the Senate.

O'Mahoney said that statehood for Alaska and Hawaii present two entirely different propositions, and that while his committee would consider both, it would not necessarily do so simultaneously. He said he was concerned about reports of communism in Hawaii, and that the committee certainly would want to look into that.

The communism issue was raised in the House debate. Representative Cox (D., Ga.) contended that the islands are "Communist controlled" and dominated by Harry Bridges, president of the CIO longshoremen's union. Bridges has denied repeatedly that he is a Communist.

Flight Ends Session Of French Assembly

Visit King

Auriols Are Guests Of Britain

London, March 7 (AP).—French President Vincent Auriol arrived in Britain today on a glittering state visit which seemed to be a gilding for less glamorous discussions at the Foreign Office on bolstering French-British relations.

With him came French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

The unassuming French President and his wife were met by King George and Queen Elizabeth, and a brilliant assembly of the nation's leaders as they arrived for a four-day stay. It has been described as just a friendly visit.

But behind the brass bands, beaver-hatted guards, vivas for France, and ostentations show that stretched from Dover to London lurked British and French anxiety over the threat of communism.

Foreign Minister Schuman talked with British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin on German and Far East problems today. They may discuss a date for a meeting with United States Secretary of State Dean Acheson, probably in April.

Paris (Wednesday), March 8 (NYHT).—A battle in which 100 deputies became involved forced the suspension of the National Assembly at 5:10 a. m. today.

Fighting more serious than that of last Friday started when Communists and Socialists began exchanging insults.

A member of each party made for each other and that touched off the battle. Usheds were powerless to stop it.

Within a minute, the well before the rostrum was a mass of at least 100 shouting, slugging parliamentarians.

A Socialist woman deputy and a Communist woman deputy started trading blows, grabbing for each other's hair.

As the press galleries were emptied as soon as possible, it was not known immediately whether the mobile guards were called in to clear the chamber, as they were last Friday and Saturday.

Today's session which had started at midnight was expected to finish the bitter debate on anti-sabotage laws designed to safeguard Atlantic Pact Arms against threatened sabotage by the Communists.

Tinder-dry tempers were evident from the start of the session.

The Communists up to now have welcomed every delay. They have been trying every parliamentary obstruction trick to block passage of laws they called "super-villainous."

The laws punish peacetime sabotage of national defense arms with a minimum of five years in prison. Existing laws cover wartime sabotage with the death penalty.

[The Assembly fight came shortly after Communist and non-Communist leaders of the nationalized gas and electric industry ordered a strike at midnight, the United Press said. The strike might plunge the Nation into a virtual blackout.

[The strike call followed a ballot in the two industries in which 83 percent of the workers voted for a walk out to back wage boost demands.]

Labor to Face Vote on Steel

steel now stands, it will not go into effect until October 1, when the government is to name a corporation to operate the industry. Actual government operation does not begin until after January 1, 1951.

Churchill also excited Morrison's ire with these statements:

1. The nation's economic plight is such that "further devaluation (of the pound) may become necessary."

2. Britain cannot regain her high place in international esteem under a government "known to be animated by bitter hostility to accumulated wealth and the declared enemy of the capitalist system."

3. The House should overhaul the national electoral system to prevent the election of members by a majority of the vote cast in their district. Churchill said 186 members of Parliament were elected by minority votes.

[Churchill's warning on further devaluation of the pound seemed to have been inspired, according to the New York Herald Tribune's correspondent, by the testimony of W. John Kenney, chief of the ECA United Kingdom mission, before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on February 23.

[During the scolding by Morrison that followed, Churchill insisted he had said no more than Kenney.

["There is the danger," Churchill said, "that further devaluation may become necessary. From this crowded island our life blood is draining away in an ever more copious flow without compensating nourishment. That is my very deep fear. We are a hard-pressed blood donor whose general health already has been weakened by his war service."]

Tydings Wants Military Men Named to AEC

Congress was urged yesterday to approve legislation requiring at least one member of the five-man atomic energy commission to be a regular military officer.

The legislation was introduced in both Houses of Congress by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) and Representative Paul Kilday (D., Tex.). Two military men could be named to the commission under the bills.

Tydings said the military member could be on the active or retired list of the Regular Army, Navy or Air Force but could not be a reservist.

Tydings said the commission originally was to comprise only civilians because "it was originally assumed its duties would be primarily civilian."

However, he said "a large proportion of the work has been military and that is likely to be true for some time to come."

As a result, he said, he and Kilday feel at least one member should be a regular military officer "with the armed services viewpoint."

Strategic Air Setup Revised

abling them to operate as an independent air force.

Reasons behind the move are these:

1. SAC is scheduled to convert most of its force from Boeing B-29s to Convair B-36s and Boeing B-50s during the coming year and a half. While many top Air Force officers are skilled in B-29 operations, SAC faces a problem in training crews and staff to equal precision work with the new weapons. Therefore each Air Force commander should have his groups as closely concentrated as possible so that he can make more frequent visits to supervise training.

2. SAC will have three "arms" instead of two for LeMay to send into action for a retaliatory atomic assault once this Nation is attacked. It would thus be more difficult for saboteurs to nullify such a counterblow by interfering with communications, etc., if there are three independent, balanced forces, than with only two bomber forces dependent on reconnaissance support from without.

3. Such forces, being grouped geographically, should be able to rendezvous and get going quicker.

4. Budgetary cuts in "administrative" flight allowances would otherwise prevent the close supervision of training of SAC.

When the new setup goes into effect April 1, the Ninth Strategic Reconnaissance Wing in California will be redesignated the Ninth Heavy Bomb Wing and the Twenty-eighth Bomb Wing at Rapid City, S. Dak., will become the Twenty-eighth Strategic Reconnaissance Wing. Both wings are scheduled to be equipped with B-36s.

Personnel of the Ninth Reconnaisance Technical Squadron at Fairfield-Suisun AF Base, totaling 350 officers and men, will be transferred to Rapid City under the move.

Two wings (combat units of groups) at Carswell AF Base, Fort Worth, are now equipped with B-36s. The Fifth Strategic Reconnaissance Wing at Fairfield-Suisun and the fourth bomber wing not yet selected also will receive B-36s. It probably will be located on the East Coast.

THE PRINCE IS HERE—Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands (right), who arrived at National Airport yesterday 30 minutes ahead of a welcoming committee, poses with The Netherlands Ambassador E. N. van Kleffens. The Prince waited for the Washington dignitaries and went then through the motions of the official welcome, which included the inspection of a guard of honor regent to explain his own early presence.

It seems the regent arrived here ahead of time and finding no one to greet him drove out to the Embassy and asked for a cup of coffee.

"And someone," the Ambassador was saying, "asked the regent, 'Who are you . . .'"

Surprise!!!

At about that point, an incredible word drifted down the corridor: The Prince was here!

Stepping very smartly, the Ambassador hurried out into the bleak afternoon.

Lo, there stood a silver DC-3 which had just been landed with the Prince himself at the controls.

It was precisely 5:15 p. m.

But no welcoming party!

Shortly the Prince himself stepped from the plane.

The smile that was on his lips and the twinkle in his eyes could have been nothing but a fine royal mischief.

Feels Fine

He got time to tell reporters "I feel fine" before he was hurried inside to await his welcoming party.

Lieutenant generals, major generals, colonels then began to arrive.

It was pleasant to see their faces when they received the news the Prince of The Netherlands was already there. Rarely has so much brass done on-the-double—upstairs to where he was.

The climax was in the arrival of the head protocol man himself.

Mr. Woodward's face was an interesting study in undiluted surprise.

"First time I've ever been . . ."

The word "late" was either lost or unspoken as he, too, made for the stairs.

Soon His Royal Highness emerged from upstairs, trailed by a chastened greeting party.

It was precisely 5:45 p. m.

The prankish prince still had that smile and that look in his eyes.

He went outside and inspected the honor guard, was then driven away to the Netherlands Embassy.

Today he'll lunch with President Truman, have a press conference, lay a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, be guest of honor at a dinner and reception at the embassy. He'll stay here Thursday, then depart for Ottawa.

Czechs Expel 3 of Dutch Legation Staff

Prague, March 7 (AP).—Three Dutch diplomats were ordered tonight to leave Czechoslovakia within eight days on charges of harming the People's Democratic (Communist) regime and helping Czech citizens carry on "antistate activities."

Counter action was hinted at The Hague.

This was Czechoslovakia's third expulsion move against Western diplomatic missions in the last six months. Two officers of the United States Embassy and two French diplomats have been expelled on spy charges.

The Dutchmen ordered out are Charge d'Affaires Jacob van der Gaag, military Attache B. R. P. F. Hasselman, and Legation Chancellor Theodore Lochman. They were declared to have been involved in the case of a Dutch businessman, Johannes Louwers, who was convicted last week on charges of economic espionage. He was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment.

A Netherlands government spokesman at The Hague indicated swift reprisals were in prospect. He said "analogous measures" will be taken, which was interpreted to mean the opposite numbers of the three Dutchmen in the Czech Legation at The Hague will be expelled.

Bill for Small Business Coordinator Favored

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday sent to the Senate a bill to set up a small business coordinator in the executive branch of the Government.

The $15,000-a-year official would have the job of seeing that small businessmen got their fair share of Government contracts. He would have one $14,000-a-year assistant, and five others getting $12,000.

The bill was introduced by Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.).

Swedish Boats Ask Escort In Baltic Sea

Stockholm, Sweden, March 7 (AP).—Various fishermen and newspapers today demanded naval escorts to protect Swedish fishing boats from seizure by Soviet authorities.

Foreign Minister Oesten Unden told a delegation of fishermen the government takes an "extremely serious view" of recent seizures and an apparent extension of Soviet territorial claims to the 12-mile limit in the narrow Baltic Sea.

The exchange reflected the shift in Swedish public opinion toward the Soviet Union since the immediate postwar period, when Sweden granted Russia a one billion crown (about 200 million dollars) credit.

The government is under internal pressure to forget about the Swedes' traditional policy of neutrality in favor of military cooperation with two neighboring North Atlantic Pact powers, Norway and Denmark.

50-Year Plan to Carry Out Point 4 Program Proposed

The Public Affairs Institute yesterday proposed a 50-year, 260-million-dollar international aid program for underdeveloped nations in an effort to create the basis for a "positive peace policy."

The institute, a nonprofit research organization, said its "sweeping and bold new plan" would call for joint effort and investment by all nations. It said the plan would be handled through the United Nations as far as possible.

Dr. Dewey Anderson, institute director, who joined economist Stephen Raushenbush in drafting the plan, said it would be "an extension" of President Truman's Point Four program.

Raise Living Standards

"It would drastically transform the economy of the world, raise the standard of living of two thirds of the world's population, and thereby establish the foundation of a more secure peace," he said.

"This is a plan for changing the face of the world with something better than the hydrogen bomb. This is what President Truman's Point Four has to look like if we mean business . . . This could be the real answer to the threat of expanding Russian imperialism."

The authors recommend an outlay of $14,700,000,000 during the first five years of their program "to pick up where the Marshall Plan leaves off." This would pay for technical assistance and finance the setting up of about "200 work centers" in underdeveloped areas.

Outright Grants Included

The first installment would include $1,700,000,000 in outright grants. Of the total, nine billion dollars would be public investment funds." Of this, the United States would supply seven billion dollars. Some four billion dollars would be private investment.

Anderson and Raushenbush said that after the first five years, the program would level off to an estimated investment of seven billion dollars a year in "repayable loans and credits and private investments."

They claimed the total expenditure of 260 billion dollars would increase production and "generate local savings and local capital that would amount to a similar total, making a grand total of 520 billion dollars to bring about vast improvements in the lives of these people."

British Reassert Intention Not to Be Ousted From Berlin

Berlin, March 7 (U.P.).—The Russians reimposed their "baby blockade" on Berlin today and British High Commissioner Sir Brian Robertson accused them of trying to enslave Germany.

He told a press conference it was Britain's policy to stay in Berlin "yesterday . . . today . . . and tomorrow."

He promised British aid if necessary to keep thousands of demonstrating Communist youths from marching into western Berlin during a giant Communist rally May 27-30 and said the Russians were organizing youths on the "Hitler formula."

Robertson spoke as the Communist youth trumpeted their defiance of earlier Western Allied threats to "suppress" them if they demonstrated in western Berlin. The Allies imposed the ban after intelligence reports said the youthful Reds planned to create widespread disturbances.

The British commissioner said the new blockade restrictions—which left some 100 German trucks lined up at the Helmstedt border checkpoint—were an attempt to undermine confidence in the Western Powers.

"There is one fact that you can take as absolutely certain," he said, "and that is that the Western Allies cannot be persuaded to leave Berlin by any means save with a proper agreement regulating the future of the city and this country."

He said the recent elections in his country had no effect on Britain's resolution to remain here, stating, "To remain in Berlin was our policy yesterday, it is our policy today, and it will be our policy tomorrow."

Unspent Funds Could Be Used For Asiatic Aid, Acheson Says

in that general area. It would, of course, be permissive.

"I suggest that we extend the act, with broadened language, and then we can work out a program later on."

This was clear evidence that the Administration had not yet made up its mind how much help to give the Communist-threatened countries of southeast Asia, or how to apportion help among them. It also suggested that any American money for the new semi-independent states of Indo-China, for example, would not be in the form of a loan, as in rich and productive Indonesia, but would take the form of outright grants.

Seek Funds for Korea

Acheson and ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman appeared before the Senate committee to support a request for 100 million dollars in recovery funds for Korea in the coming fiscal year. This would be the second annual instalment of a three-year program designed to make non-Soviet Korea self-supporting.

In a prepared statement Acheson said Korea was one place where the United States "can continue to take well-defined positive steps to survive in the face of efforts of communism to engulf it."

The Secretary took issue with those members of Congress, chiefly in the House, who voted against continued Korean aid last January because they feared it might fail.

"It is my belief," he told the committee, "that American policy should be based on determination to succeed rather than on fear of the possibility of failure.

"Despite the problems with which the Republic of Korea is beset both internally and externally . . . conditions of stability and public order have continued to improve and the threat of Communist overthrow appears at least temporarily to have been contained.

"There is good reason to hope from progress made thus far that with our assistance the Republic of Korea can survive and thrive. This cannot, of course, be guaranteed. However, it continues to be true that without our assistance there can be no such hope."

Hoffman and his ECA aides gave the committee glowing reports of industrial and agricultural progress in Korea. The ECA administrator said the new Korean army had "the will to fight" if necessary.

Green Holds Similar View

"What Korea has achieved under tough conditions is nothing less than spectacular," he said. A similar tribute came from Senator Theodore H. Green (D., R. I.), a committe member who visited Korea briefly last fall.

"Of all the countries I have visited that have received American aid," said Green, "I don't know of any that has been more appreciative or more worthy of it than Korea."

The proposed Korean aid would be authorized as part of the third-year ECA bill now before the congressional foreign policy committees. If Acheson's advice is followed, the bill will also contain a clause extending this year's China-Formosa program another year and widening its scope.

Garry Davis Due For U. S. Visa

Paris, March 7. (U.P.)—American expatriate Garry Davis, who turned in his passport nearly two years ago, now wants to return to the United States as a French immigrant, the U. S. Embassy announced today.

An Embassy spokesman said Davis, ex-GI son of bandleader Meyer Davis, had applied for an immigration visa which probably would be granted "within a few days."

He would enter the United States on the French immigration quota.

Davis came to Europe to be a "world citizen." He said tonight he would work for world citizenship in the United States.

Kravchenko Tells Of Spy Data Flow

Victor Kravchenko, the former Soviet official who renounced communism in 1944, testified yesterday that the Russians used to call the espionage data they collected here "super lend-lease."

Kravchenko

Kravchenko, author of the best-selling book, "I Chose Freedom," described to the House Committee on Un-American Activities his experiences as an official of the Soviet Purchasing Commission.

Going over already well-plowed ground, Kravchenko related how all Soviet Communists here—whether members of the embassy or the Purchasing Commission—had an espionage duty in addition to their official jobs.

Never Checked, He Says

The great quantities of materials they amassed, on American industry—particularly war industry—and on military affairs, were shipped to Russia under diplomatic immunity, as official mail, or else were loaded in crates on lend-lease planes flying to Russia, or simply on boats carrying lend-lease supplies, he said.

The material was never checked by American officials, Kravchenko said.

"It was just put on a ship, in boxes—who cared? We could have packed up the Empire State Building—nobody cared," the former Russian engineer said.

He testified that every official sent here from Russia was first briefed with great care on the covert, espionage duties he was to perform in the United States. And each was also indoctrinated with the fact that he was going to a nation essentially inimical to the Soviet Union, and with which a future conflict was inevitable.

Policy Made "Clear"

It was made "perfectly clear," he said, that Russia was not friendly to the United States, and was allied to it only because there was a war.

Departing officials were told that Russia would never modify its policy toward the United States, might ultimately go to war with it, and accordingly had to know as much as possible about its industry and war potential.

"Did Russia regard the United States as an enemy, even when we fought a common foe?" Representative B. W. Kearney (R., N. Y.) asked him.

"Ideologically, yes," Kravchenko replied.

Woman Grand Juror Barred as Communist

Pittsburgh, March 7 (U.P.)—Judge Michael A. Musmanno today barred a woman, accused of being a Communist organizer from the Allegheny County grand jury.

He dismissed Alice Roth of East Pittsburgh, who was accused by FBI informant, Matthew Cvetic, of seeking to spread communism among district electrical workers.

"A grand juror must be loyal to the Constitution of the United States and respect its laws," Judge Musmanno said. "A grand juror must be above suspicion, judicious in temper, considerate in judgment and without bias."

Judge Musmanno yesterday summoned Cvetic from Washington, where he was testifying before the House Un-American Activities Committee. At a meeting in the judge's chambers, Cvetic identified Miss Roth as a Communist.

Court Rejects Guilty Plea in Treason Case

New York, March 7. (A.P.)—Federal Judge Harold R. Medina today refused to accept a plea of guilty from John David Provoo, 33-year-old former Army staff sergeant charged with treason.

Medina said Provoo's offer to plead guilty came "on an impulse." Provoo, accused of collaborating with the Japanese after his capture in the Philippines, appeared in court for fixing of the date of his treason trial and assigning him counsel. The former San Francisco bank clerk told the court: "I have been a long time getting justice and when my superiors in the Philippines lost confidence in me I was dead."

Col. Isidore Hornstein of Jersey City, temporarily representing Provoo, declared he has a "good defense," with 70 witnesses, including Japanese and American soldiers. The matter was adjourned to March 21 in Medina's court.

Premier of Pakistan To Arrive Here May 3

The State Department announced yesterday that Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Kahn of Pakistan will arrive here May 3 on a state visit.

He will be accompanied by his wife, the Begum Liaquat Ali Khan.

The Prime Minister will go to Canada May 30 for a brief visit.

From May 3 until May 10 he will tour Washington and New York.

Miss Coplon, Gubitchev Guilty, Held for Sentence Thursday

women's House of Detention, she summoned up a feeble smile. She hugged and kissed one of her court-assigned defense lawyers, Leonard Boudin. Then she embraced her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Coplon.

Gubitchev, blond and scarcely an inch taller than 5-foot Miss Coplon, stared stonily ahead when he heard the verdict. A slight flush tinged his cheeks as the jurors, twice polled, intoned "guilty . . . guilty . . . guilty." He left for the Federal Detention House in a van with 17 other prisoners, including former Army Sergeant John David Provoo, charged with treason.

In the six-week trial, the defendants flatly denied any spy plotting. Their story was that they met secretly in New York because they fell in love after a chance meeting at the Museum of Modern Art. Miss Coplon said her love cooled when she learned Gubitchev was married.

Judge Thanks Jurors

The jury, however, believed the Government's version—that they met secretly in New York so that Miss Coplon could slip the Russian secret FBI reports and other data from her Justice Department offices. The Government did not charge that any papers actually passed between them.

Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan thanked the jurors in dismissing them and said their verdict was "just and proper."

United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol issued a statement praising the FBI—whose wire-tapping and some other activities were assailed by the defense during the trial and seven weeks of pretrial hearings.

"We in the Government," Saypol said, "are not oblivious to the sinister attempts to undermine us and we shall continue aggressively and forthrightly to vindicate our laws and protect our country."

Chief Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., said the verdict would help make the country aware of "vicious elements which seek to malign this great organization (the FBI)."

Defense lawyers declared themselves baffled by the verdict.

"I can't figure this damn thing out," said Gubitchev's attorney, Abraham L. Pomerantz.

"If you can explain this, then you're better than I," said Miss Coplon's chief defense counsel, Samuel Neuburger.

Both lawyers said they couldn't understand how Miss Coplon could be acquitted on count No. 2 of the indictment while Gubitchev was convicted on count No. 3.

Count No. 2 charged Miss Coplon alone with atempting to pass secret papers to an unauthorized person. The penalty for that is up to 10 years in prison plus a $10,000 fine.

Count No. 3 charged Gubitchev alone with attempting, as an unauthorized person, to get secret papers. The maximum penalty is the same as for count No. 2.

Both defendants were convicted on count No. 1. This charges they conspired to spy by removing secret documents from Government files and by defrauding the Government of Miss Coplon's impartial services. The maximum penalty is five years and $10,000 fine.

On count No. 4, most serious of all, Miss Coplon alone was convicted of attempting to pass national defense secrets to a citizen of a foreign power—Russia—"to the injury of the United States."

Ober Law Foes To Carry Case To High Court

Annapolis, Md., March 7 (A.P.)—Opponents of Maryland's antisubversive law acted today to carry their case to the Supreme Court of the United States.

They received an "order allowing appeal" from Chief Judge Ogle Marbury of the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The State court last month held the subversive activities act of 1949 was constitutional. The decision upset a Baltimore Circuit Court ruling.

Mitchell A. Dubow, attorney for a citizens committee which originally brought suit, appeared at the court this morning for the appeal order.

A mandate announcing its opinion that the law is constitutional will be issued by the State court this Saturday. It could simultaneously order a "stay of mandate" to suspend operation of the law, but Dubow said "there is no indication" the court will do so.

As the highest appeals bench, the Supreme Court has authority to hand down a similar order.

Framed by a commission led by Baltimore Atorney Frank B. Ober, the 1949 law prescribed stiff prison terms and fines for subversive activity, required loyalty checks of public employes and set up a special assistant attorney general to enforce its provisions.

Tsaldaris Party Leads in Greek Vote

By Gaston Coblentz

Athens, March 7 (NYHT).—Former Premier Constantin Tsaldaris, leader of the Populist Party, was tonight about 13,000 votes ahead of Gen. Nicholas Plastiras, according to the latest official tally in the Greek parliamentary elections.

There was great doubt, however, that Tsaldaris would have a big enough majority to form a government.

The elections were held Sunday but returns are still incomplete. Final results may not be known until sometime Wednesday.

Plastiras, dark horse of the election, told this reporter tonight he did not yet concede victory to Tsaldaris, since the final complicated tally has not been made of the allocation of parliamentary seats. He said he still has hope that his party, the National Progressive Union of the Center, might have the largest number of parliamentary seats, although behind in the popular vote.

By custom, the King calls on the party with the highest parliamentary score, rather than the highest popular vote, to form the government.

The latest official returns from the Ministry of Interior were as follows, for the five main parties:

Tsaldaris, 263,320.

Plastiras, 250,079.

Liberal Party of Sophocles Venizelos, 240,422.

Democratic Front, 151,783.

Bulgarians To Sentence Shipkov

London, March 7 (AP).—Bulgaria today wound up her two-day trial of Michael Shipkov, former United States Legation employe in Sofia, and four other Bulgarians, all of whom are reported to have confessed spying for the United States. The verdicts will be handed down Wednesday.

Shipkov had warned in an affidavit released by the State Department in Washington Saturday, two days before the trial opened, that he would be forced to confirm a false statement he said was wrung from him by Bulgarian police through hours of questioning and occasional blows.

[In the document released by the State Department the 39-year-old translator gave the background of his "confession" after his first arrest last August. He said he was questioned 32 hours without rest and tortured physically until he agreed to say the American and British legations were hotbeds of espionage.

[After his release at that time he was hidden for six months in the United States Legation, during which he wrote the 8000-word account of his torture. He was rearrested February 11, when he left the legation. Bulgarian authorities declared he was attempting to cross the Turkish frontier when arrested the second time.—Editor's note.]

The Sofia radio said that on the witness stand today this exchange took place between Shipkov and the presiding judge:

The court: "Were some tortures, some menaces on the part of a certain of the government, used upon you at that time?" (When Shipkov was arrested).

Shipkov: "No."

The court: "The New York radio said in a broadcast last night that you have been tortured and hypnotized to make statements before the tribunal."

Shipkov: "I wasn't."

Memory of Masaryk Honored On 100th Anniversary of Birth

More than 500 persons gathered in Washington last night to mark the 100th anniversary of the birth of Thomas G. Masaryk, founder and first president of the Republic of Czechoslovakia.

The local memorial meeting took note that in Czechoslovakia the only celebration yesterday was held in the United States Information Service library.

The program here was held in Pierce Hall, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., under sponsorship of the Associated Czechoslovak-American Societies in Washington and the All Souls Unitarian Church.

The former Czechoslovakian Ambassador to the United States, Dr. Juraj Slavik, said this was a tribute to the importance of American freedom.

"As Masaryk founded Czechoslovagian freedom on the firm rock of American freedom, so we new exiles have to follow his example today," Dr. Slavik said.

Associate Justice Robert H. Jackson of the Supreme Court traced Masaryk's life and his contributions to humanity.

"Thomas Masaryk belongs to the Czechs, he belongs to America, he belongs to all the people of the world. His influence was felt in many countries," the Justice declared.

He urged, "Let us rededicate ourselves tonight to the daring faith of Thomas Mesaryk."

Representative Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.), dean of the House and a Czech himself, spoke movingly of his part in getting President Woodrow Wilson to see "this enemy alien from Austria—Thomas Masaryk." Sabath was the first man to greet Masaryk on arrival in this country during World War II.

Ax-Swinging GIs Defer Court Case

The coal shortage hurled a clinker into a Municipal Court case yesterday.

Fourteen soldiers, slated to appear as witnesses for a cab driver with soliciting passengers, could not show up, the driver's attorney explained, because they had been assigned to a wood-chopping detail at Fort Belvoir, due to the coal shortage.

The attorney, Robert T. Smith, representing Harold Dazion, a taxi driver, of 1223 12th st. nw., asked continuance of the case on the grounds that most soldiers had been confined to the post to chop wood for the hospital and other buildings using soft coal.

Judge Armond Scott set March 22 as the date for trial.

Dazion was accused by inspectors for the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington bus line of soliciting soldiers as passengers in the vicinity of 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. Solicitation is illegal under PUC regulations.

D. C. Architect To Get $70,000 Estate of Brother

Boston, Mass., March 7 (Spl.).—Harry Barrett, Washington architect, of 2100 Connecticut ave. nw., will receive a $70,000 estate under a court ruling announced today.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court upheld a Probate Court decision disallowing the will of John Barrett of Malden, Mass., internationally famous crossword puzzle designer who was drowned in 1947.

The estate thus reverts to the Washington Barrett, half-brother of the dead man.

The Probate Court refused to admit a will leaving the estate to Ruby Constance Murrell of London, England, holding there was no proof Barrett was in England in 1940 when the will was alleged to have been drawn. The Supreme Court also held that different inks were used in sections of the will where Barrett's signature appeared.

Fare Who Wanted "To Go Further" Robs Cabbie of $25

A cab driver was slugged and robbed of $25 last night by a fare who insisted on being taken "a little further down the street."

George H. Shaw, 54, who drives a cab here but lives in Vienna, Va., told police he picked up the fare opposite the White House about 8 p. m.

He said the man asked to be taken to 24th and M sts. nw., but when they arrived there wanted to be taken further down the block. He repeated this until Shaw stopped in front of the Francis Junior High School, where he suddenly attacked him, took his money and fled.

A passing cab driver took Shaw to George Washington University Hospital where he was treated for deep lacerations to the face and head.

Flag Flies Again Over USS Arizona At Pearl Harbor

Pearl Harbor, March 7 (AP). — The Flag flies again from the Battleship Arizona, which sank at her berth in the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Standing before a shining mast raised on the rusting Hulk, Adm. Arthur W. Radford, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, declared today:

"From today on, the Arizona will fly our country's flag just as proudly as she did on the morning of December 7, 1941."

The bodies of 1092 of the Arizona's officers and men remain in the hulk of the ship, a 28-year-old veteran at the time she was sunk.

There have been many plans for honoring these dead. Admiral Radford finally ordered a simple and direct remembrance a 50-foot flagpole. It was set on the superstructure which still juts above the water.

Each day the flag will be raised and lowered as are the colors on any active ship of the fleet.

4 Plays Picked For Finals in District Contest

Four plays to be judged in the District Recreation Department's amateur contest were chosen last night. The run-off will take place at 8:15 p. m. Thursday in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School 13th and Upshur sts. nw.

The four plays are "Paragraph at Sam's" by Carl Eardley, an original presentation, Montgomery Players; "A Night at the Inn," by Lord Dunsany; Foundry Players, "Knives in Syria," by Lynn Riggs, Alexandria Little Theater; "Jinxed," by George Mosel, Neighborhood Players.

Judges of the preliminaries were Col. Frank A. Derouin, Mrs. Wilson Ewart and Frank L. Baer. Judges of the finals will be the dramatic critics of Washington newspapers.

2 Young Anglers 'Borrow' Dinghy, Caught 'At Sea'

Two District boys had planned to go fishing today. They won't. Police nabbed them last night in an eight-foot dinghy they had "borrowed" for the fishing expedition.

Harbor police received a call at 6:30 p. m. that two boys paddling a boat in the Washington Channel of the Potomac River appeared to be in trouble.

When a police motor launch hove into sight, the boys headed for shore. One boy, 9, scampered up the sea wall and dashed into the grounds of Fort McNair but was grabbed by MPs. Harbor police seized his 12-year-old companion in the dinghy.

Police said the boys told them they intended to return the boat after the fishing trip. Mindful of their own boyhood, police let them off with a scolding and sent them some to their parents.

Justice Dept. Considers Ambrose Case

Justice Department attorneys yesterday began studying details of the reputed $600,000 stamp deals of Harold F. Ambrose, former Postoffice public relations officer.

A comprehensive report—the result of a two-month investigation by postal officials—was turned over to the Justice Department on Monday by Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson.

Criminal division attorneys will sift the findings to determine what action, if any, will be taken, a spokesman said.

No violation of Federal law was uncovered during the Postoffice investigation, inspectors said.

Ambrose was relieved of his $10,000-a-year Postoffice job early last January. The Postmaster General said he had learned Ambrose has been handling a large scale commemorative stamp investment plan and that operations over an 18-month period ran to about $600,000.

The plan was based on an assumed rise in the value of the stamps after they had been bought up, it was reported. Donaldson said about 25 persons invested in the scheme and that about half a dozen lost about $200,000.

Shop Center Opposed at Zone Hearing

Vigorous opposition to the establishment of a shopping center at Old Georgetown rd. and Beach dr. was expressed last night by some 60 residents of the Alta Vista section at a hearing by the Montgomery County Council in the Bethesda County Building.

The hearing was concerned with a petition filed by the Cambridge Construction Co., for commercial zoning of a tract of approximately 60,641 square feet.

William C. Burrage, planning director of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, declared the commission recommended denial of the petition, as requested zoning is not in accord with its proposed master zoning plan.

Principal reasons given in opposition to the zoning request were that residents desired retention of the residential atmosphere of the community, the shopping center would create a traffic hazard and the proposed stores are not needed.

Testimony was introduced, on the other hand, that 164 area residents favored the center compared with 23 who opposed it in a post card sampling of the area.

Mass Will Mark Papal Reign

The eleventh anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius XII will be marked at a solemn high mass at 11 a. m. Sunday at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University.

Present for the mass will be the Most Rev. Amleto G. Cicignani, apostolic delegate to the United States, and the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington.

Celebrant of the mass will be the Very Rev. John P. McCormick, rector of the Theological College of Catholic University. The sermon will be given by the Most Rev. James E. Kearney, bishop of Rochester, N. Y.

Officiating prelates, including faculty members in academic robes and members of the clergy, will form a procession in the vestibule of the shrine preceding the service.

Expert Rules Out Air Injection Death

Manchester, N. H., March 7 (AP). A noted Harvard pathologist testified today the air Dr. Hermann N. Sander has admitted injecting into Mrs. Abbie Borroto's arm had nothing to do with her death.

Dr. Richard F. Ford, one of the few doctors who has made an extensive study of air embolism, gave this testimony at the "mercy death" murder trial of the 41-year-old country doctor.

Dr. Sander is charged specifically with killing the cancer-ravaged woman by injecting 40 cubic centimeters of air into her veins.

Dr. Ford, head of the department of legal medicine at Harvard, said:

1. Air could not have been injected into Mrs. Borroto's vein on the left arm as the vein had collapsed. (Both sides agree the injections were made just below the elbow of the left arm.)

2. Forty CCs of air could not kill a human being—regardless of the person's weakened condition; a fatal dose would be at least 200 or 300 CCs.

Dr. Sander told the jury he made the injections on the spur of the moment when "something snapped" in his mind—even though he "knew" Mrs. Borroto was dead.

Two State pathologists had testified earlier they believed Mrs. Borroto died from air embolism caused by injection of air into her veins.

But Dr. Ford said the autopsy convinced him Mrs. Borroto's vein in her left arm before death was "no longer carrying blood and therefore collapsed."

Attorney General William L. Phinney succeeded in drawing an admission from Dr. Ford that injections of air would be "more dangerous" to a sick person than a healthy one. Dr. Ford conceded, too, that he knew of no medical reason for injecting air into a person.

When court adjourned for the day, the prosecutor and the medical expert were still sparring. They will resume Wednesday.

Chief Defense Counsel Louis E. Wyman told newsmen he may call more witnesses before resting his case. Phinney said he plans to present "a few" rebuttal witnesses after the defense rests.

This means that the case will not go to the jury before Thursday, for Judge Harold E. Wescott said counsels' summations must start at 10 a. m. to avoid interruptions by any overnight adjournments.

Just before Dr. Ford was called as the defense's "star" medical witness, Mrs. Alice Dewitt Sander took the witness stand to tell the jury how hard her husband worked.

"I spoke to him many times about his rest," she said, "but it didn't do much good."

She testified, too, that he was "extremely tired" the first of last December—a few days before Mrs. Borroto's death December 4.

Mrs. Sander smiled warmly as she told of her husband's habits—how he wasn't a very good businessman; how he was so busy he came home to supper only two nights a week; how he spent hours while at home studying his cases.

The 37-year-old mother of three young daughters was on the stand only 10 minutes. When she had finished telling her story, Attorney General Phinney rose and said softly: "No questions."

Barrett Confers on Richitt With Crime Committee Head

concluded that we are not going to make any report or conclusions or findings on the two days of hearings last Friday and Saturday. So I have made that statement to Major Barrett and Mr. Maher."

The dramatic two-day hearing was touched off by Capt. Richitt's charge he was transferred from the Third to the Eighth Precinct early last week in reprisal for information he gave the committee last month.

Main question raised by the flareup and left unanswered by testimony at the hearing, was this—Who told Emmitt Warring, reputed kingpin of Washington gambling, that the committee's curiosity was being focused on the lack of gambling arrests in the Third and Seventh Precincts during the last fiscal year?

Richitt said Warring told him he got the word from "the boss," meaning Major Barrett. Warring denied ever referring to Major Barrett as "the boss," and said his information came from Capt. Beverly C. Beach of the Seventh Precinct.

Denial By Beach

Beach denied telling Warring of the committee's interest, but said he did put to Warring the question whether he was gambling in the Seventh Precinct, then disclosed the Major's—but not the committee's interest.

The hearing wound up with Davis' release of the detailed statement of Barrett's reasons for ordering Richitt's transfer.

Davis was asked by a reporter whether the conference with Barrett was a preliminary step by the police superintendent toward further action on the charges he leveled against Richitt. These involved mainly discourtesy to higher ranking officers and non-performance of orders.

"I don't know," said Davis.

Committee Through

He added that Barrett probably had a natural desire to know whether the committee was finished with the subject of the two-day hearing.

Davis said he was glad to be able to give him the definite statement the committee was through. He said Barrett apparently had been uncertain of what further action the committee might take about the Friday and Saturday hearing.

Simpson Statement

Representative Sid Simpson (R., Ill.), ranking Republican member of the Davis committee, said he agreed with Davis that no "separate" set of conclusions covering the hearings of Friday and Saturday should be issued.

Simpson also said he will back Davis' request for $40,000 to continue the crime inquiry, with emphasis on gambling.

Davis took this request to the House Accounts Committee yesterday, and touched off another flareup on the question of Washington home rule.

As the closed meeting on Davis' request started, Representative Wayne L. Hays (D., Ohio) left the room to take a phone call.

He told reporters he was not going to return to the meeting. He said the Davis committee was made up of opponents to home rule legislation, now bottled up in the House District Committee.

Hays said he wanted to quiz Davis about home rule in an open hearing of the accounts subcommittee. With home rule, he said, the people here could investigate their own crime problems.

Davis would not comment on the Hays statement. Maher and Barrett would not comment on their conference with Davis.

Ex-Prince Georges Sheriff Indicted in $10,430 Tax Fraud

1943, Sheriff reported a net income of $1695.49 and paid $176.53 in taxes, when he actually had a net income of $7569.59 and should have paid income taxes of $1655.-14, or a total evasion of $1478.61.

For 1944, the indictment charged, Sheriff reported a net income of $1749.74 and paid taxes of $187.43, when his net income was actually $9891.97 and he should have paid income taxes of $2545.03, or a total evasion of $2357.60.

In 1945, the indictment charged, Sheriff reported a net income of $1740.14 and paid taxes of $185.20, but should have reported a net income of $9074.85 and should have paid taxes of $2242.70, or a total evasion of $2057.50.

For 1946, Sheriff reported a net income of $3278.29 and paid taxes of $370, the indictment charged, but should have reported net income of $16,926.21 and should have paid taxes of $4907.05, for a total evasion in 1946 of $4537.05.

Agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue have been investigating Sheriff for more than five months. In June, 1949, it was reported that agents had examined Sheriff's safety deposit box. At that time Sheriff told reporters "I don't know a thing."

The sheriff in Prince Georges County is elected for a term of four years, but according to law cannot succeed himself. Custom has dictated that the chief deputy be nominated for the job.

On November 25, 1949, tax liens totaling $8133.17 were filed in the Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro, Md., against another Prince Georges County law enforcement official.

He is Eugene B. Plumer, former chief of police of Mount Rainier. The Government charges that he owes $1691.17 in back taxes for 1945, $1892.85 for 1946, $2509.11 for 1947, and $2040.04 for 1948.

Plumer was ousted as chief of police by newly elected Mayor Herbert W. Reichlt in May, 1949, after serving on the police force for 26 years.

Plumer, now a filling station operator, lives at 4208 Russell ave., Mount Rainier. He could not be reached for comment.

FBI Snares Wac's 'Colonel'

for a lavish wedding party at the Mayflower Hotel.

One of the Wac's superiors was suspicious of the man's manner, and checked with the Pentagon. No. "Col. Larry Gaylord Hill" was listed by Air Force personnel.

Military Intelligence asked the FBI to pick up Joyce on a charge of illegally wearing a uniform. But when the FBI started looking for Joyce December 16 he had disappeared, leaving his bride behind.

A few days later, his convertible was found abandoned in Roanoke, Va. On December 22, he cashed a $1600 counter draft on a non-existent Chicago bank in Miami, Fla.

Gets Another Car

He used the money to buy a Mercury. The following day he sold it for $700 cash. Then he dropped from sight.

FBI agents in Chicago learned that Joyce would appear last Saturday night in an ice cream parlor to meet a friend. A trap was set. Joyce showed. He got into an argument with the friend and whipped out a pistol. The gun misfired. The G-Men took over.

This is Joyce's criminal record, according to the FBI:

Convicted in Fort Worth, Tex., in February, 1943, of impersonating a Federal officer and sentenced to 13 months in the Federal El Reno Reformatory in Oklahoma.

Convicted in Los Angeles in August, 1946, of forgery and sentenced to serve 1 to 14 years in San Quentin Prison. He was paroled July 18, 1949, and returned to Hammond.

The disillusioned Wac bride still is on duty at Fort Myer. She declined comment yesterday.

devised, he said, by Dr. Richard L. Meiling, director of medical services for the Department of Defense, and a department budget officer, Joseph Corie.

Boone described the latter as "a former pharmacist's mate third class," and was skeptical of Meiling's experience and ability. He said he had been surprised to learn that the latter had had only 12 years of medical practice, of which only four or five years consisted of "general practice."

The Admiral added that he was surprised at this because Meiling's job calls for "a giant of our profession."

Meiling previously had testified that the Armed Services now maintain more hospital beds than are needed and that the cutback was justified as an economy move.

The subcommittee, however, received testimony from the Surgeon Generals of the Army, Navy and Air Force, as well as Boone, that they were not consulted in advance of Johnson's February 1 order closing the hospitals. The Secretary said the move would produce savings of 25 million dollars annually.

Maj. Gen. Harry G. Armstrong, Surgeon General of the Air Force, told the subcomittee the move actually would cost the USAF an additiional $132,000 a year instead of producing a saving. He declared the Johnson order "may have been premature."

The group also heard testimony yesterday from one of its staff experts, Robert Smart, that the Veterans Administration is building or planning to build one or more new veterans' hospitals in the general area of the military and naval hospitals to be closed.

Boone told the group the plan would adversely affect the training of medical personnel for the armed forces.

British Firm Builds Jet Automobile

Birmingham, England, March 7. (U.P.)—A British motors firm today confirmed reports it is working on a 300-horsepower, jet-propelled automobile, but said it has only reached the experimental stage.

Officials of the Rover Car Co. said reports that the new car would be ready for demonstration Thursday were "a breach of confidence . . . The whole thing was embellished."

R. S. Mills, Rover's public relations chief, said the jet-car "would definitely be tried out sometime—but we can't say when."

Reports in London said the jet-car was a clutchless, gearless, 300-horsepower vehicle with a gas turbine engine.

The reports said its "Whizzer" engine was based on a jet engine developed by Sir Frank Whittle, world pioneer in jet propulsion.

Informed automotive quarters said the Rover engine is a jet-turbine, similar in principle to those used to drive propeller-turbine airplanes—not a straight jet used on such planes as the Shooting Star.

The engine, these reports said, is three feet long, and 18 inches wide. It runs on kerosene.

NLRB Bars Union Ban on 'Stoolpigeon'

A National Labor Relations Board trial examiner ruled yesterday that a union cannot legally forbid its members to sail on a ship with a seaman it accused of being a "stoolpigeon."

NLRB Examiner Wallace E. Royster found that the blacklisting of steward George C. Quinley by the Marine Cooks and Stewards (CIO) resulted in his being fired by the Burns Steamship Co.

The union was ordered to reimburse Quinley for back pay—the first instance under the Taft-Hartley law in which a union has been solely liable for back pay.

The union also was ordered to drop Quinley from its "blacklist." Royster's ruling, which has the effect of a board order unless appealed within 20 days, was made after hearings in New York, Washington, Baltimore and San Francisco.

He said the union violated the law by causing the company to discriminate against Quinley by firing him. Quinley himself brought the charges.

Royster found that Quinley was fired in July, 1949, while his ship was in Baltimore after a round-the-world cruise. He said the union had instructed prospective crew members not to sign on so long as Quinley was retained.

Hospital Head Resigns

Arthur B. Solon has resigned as superintendent of the Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, the hospital's board of directors announced yesterday. He will be succeeded by Miss Amelia C. Manry, assistant administrator of Doctors Hospital.

The new superintendent will take over her duties on March 18.

Solon, who lives at 7243 Arlington ave., Bethesda, has been at the hospital post since April, 1945. His resignation, submitted February 8, was accepted by the directors on February 22 but public announcement was not made until yesterday.

In his letter of resignation, Solon said he is "seeking a better opportunity" but gave no other reason for resigning.

Miss Manry, 43, has been at Doctors Hospital since January 1944. Prior to that time she was lay assistant administrator at St. Peter's Hospital, New Brunswick, N. J. for 12 years. She lives at 1028 Connecticut ave. nw., but is presently vacationing in Florida.

New Parkfairfax School Dedicated

Charles D. Barrett Elementary School, Parkfairfax, was dedicated last night in ceremonies conducted by city officials and school board members.

The school, in operation since early February, cost about $500,000. It replaces a temporary wartime structure.

Participating in last night's ceremonies were Alexandria Mayor Franklin D. Backus, School Superintendent T. C. Williams, School Board Chairman J. S. Everly, and Maj. Charles D. Barrett, for whose late father the school is named.

WHAT MAKES A GOOD EGG?

Take stock of your cooking and eating habits and those of your family. You'll probably find that eggs, more than any other one food or ingredient, dominate them! They're the one farm product that is eaten, in a variety of ways, as a food itself—and that is an important ingredient in countless recipes. Therefore, you certainly want to know what makes a good egg.

Don't get the impression that eggs graded U. S. Government "A" are necessarily fresh. Even storage eggs, if they meet certain specifications, will carry U. S. Government Grade "A".

What is important about EGGS?

GIANT feels the most important points about an egg are its freshness and quality. That's why GIANT handles only eggs from nearby farms, thus making it possible for us to bring you eggs in their freshest condition.

What controls an Egg's Quality?

Its quality depends on the breed, environment, and proper scientific feeding of the chicken. That's why GIANT gets its eggs from farmers who are exclusively egg producers and whose sole attention and scientific knowledge is devoted to outstanding egg production.

There's a great difference between eggs produced by chickens which roam the farm picking up "scratch" here and there—and eggs produced by chickens fed with scientific mash (grain, bran) and other fattening foods including a daily ration of buttermilk and even cod liver oil. It's eggs of this latter kind of chicken which GIANT features in every one of its 20 stores.

Aureomycin Proves Superior in Treatment Of Some Appendicitis Cases, Surgeons Told

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Aureomycin, one of the new "wonder" drugs, is proving superior in treating peritonitis in appendicitis cases, three Baltimore surgeons reported yesterday.

Appearing before 300 doctors of the Southeastern Surgical Congress, Dr. William D. Lynn reported that in 39 cases last year the new drug resulted in a reduction of the average hospital stay from 18½ days to 12.

He rated aureomycin superior to streptomycin or penicillin in such cases.

Dr. Lynn, resident in surgery at the University of Maryland Hospital, said 35 of the 39 had prompt surgery. Three of the four had later interval appendectomies.

The only one that went without surgery was described by Dr. Lynn as an actress, who refused an operation because she didn't want any scars on her body. He declined to identify her.

In an aside from his scientific paper, Dr. Lynn noted that the actress later collapsed during a road tour and the information was given out that it was food poisoning. He said he suspected it was a recurrence of the chronic appendix.

The surgeon praised aureomycin for its wide antibacterial range and said "it should prove to be invaluable to the prophylaxis and treatment of peritonitis." He warned, however, that it should not be given intravenously more than two days because of its toxic quality when administered this way.

The paper was prepared by Dr. George H. Yeager, professor of clinical surgery at the University of Maryland School of Medicine; Dr. Thomas G. Barnes, jr., assistant resident in surgery at the University Hospital, and Dr. Lynn.

Earlier, Dr. Willard H. Parsons of Vicksburg, Miss., warned that as the population in the age bracket 60 years and more increases in this country, surgeons will be faced with "the special problem of surgery in the aged Negro.

Because of their limited medical care in earlier days, Negro patients are greater risks on the operating table than white persons, he said.

"Only by the exercise of every precaution can the mortality of surgery in the aged Negro be kept parallel with the mortality of surgery in the aged white patients and can the death rates in both races be improved," he said.

The four-day conference, which winds up Thursday night, continues today at 9 a. m. at the Shoreham Hotel.

'Missionary' Urges Return To Churches

The Washington Post
THELMA HOLDER
The walking missionary

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Miss Thelma Holder, a woman with keen brown eyes, came into the city room of The Washington Post yesterday, plumped some newspaper clippings on the desk and talked about the need for people to get back to religion.

Miss Holder is known, but not by her own styling, as "walking missionary." The clippings she showed came from papers all the way from New York to Denver, Colo, from Aubuquerque, N. Mex., back to Washington. That is how far she has walked.

She arrived here after walking over the Allegheny Mountain range in a blizzard.

Miss Holder is not walking by choice. She doesn't have the money to travel any other way. Along the way, she sometimes is given rides by people who see the tiny gold cross on her lapel, or the legend "missionary" on her bag.

At 50, she has a theory about the world she doesn't ask people to agree with; only to listen to.

It is that too many people have been turned away by the hypocrisy of some of the people who do attend church. "Those who go to church on Sunday and fleece you on Monday," she explained.

Miss Holder doesn't think everybody is like that. And she wants to convince those who have given up going to church that they shoud go back to the church of their own choice.

Miss Holder figures that 70 million people in this country have abandoned the practice of religion in churches.

It is this segment of the population which she believes cannot yet be served through orthodox channels that she tries to reach and to convince.

Her meetings with them are casual. If someone would rather talk over his problems with a "walking missionery" than with a pastor or priest or rabbi, Miss Holder hopes that person will find her, or she them.

Miss Holder is staying at the Dodge Hotel here, which she says is "about as cheap as the YWCA."

But whether she stays or continues her trek across the face of the land, she seems to carry with her a conviction that this Nation has the possibility of wiping out pain and poverty if its peoples change the quality of their lives and go to church.

Miss Muth Leaves $109,000 Estate

Miss Bertha May Muth, who died here February 24 at the age of 70, left an estate of approximately $109,000, it was learned yesterday when her will was filed for probate in District Court.

Under terms of the will, the bulk of the estate goes to a nephew, George E. Muth, of the George F. Muth & Co. firm here. Her home at 3564 Appleton st. nw., goes to two nieces, Mrs. Dorothy Muth Latimer and Miss Flora Lee Muth. A $500 bequest goes to St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

Doctors Hospital 10 Years Old

Like any strapping youngster on his tenth birthday, Doctors Hospital yesterday found itself in the pink of condition.

"Physically and financially we're in excellent shape," said Dr. Charles Stanley White, president of the Columbia Operating Corp., which runs the hospital.

The culmination of the efforts of a group of physicians who also built offices and a parking garage in the "medical center" on I st. between 18th and 19th sts. nw., the young 'un is also extremely popular.

Its 360 beds are always between 95 and 100 percent filled. "We always have a waiting list," said Dr. White who turned the first spadeful of earth on January 10, 1939, to begin construction of the new hospital. Last June the mortgage was burned.

Plans for expansion, however, he said, are being held in abeyance.

The 300 stockholders in the Columbia Operating Corp., which also operates the garage and office buildings, are still mostly doctors, Dr. White reported.

5 to 15-Cent Boost In Rentals Granted

Naylor Gardens, which had sought rent increases on 448 apartments ranging from $6.50 to $9 a month, may have to settle for pennies.

District Rent Control Examiner William F. Mansfield, who held a two-day hearing on the request in January, yesterday recommended an increase of 5 to 15 cents a month.

The rent control office said it was the smallest increase recommended for a large apartment development here in the eight years rent controls have been in effect.

Mansfield's recommended order becomes final March 17 unless protest is made to the rent control administrator.

A spokesman for the Veterans Cooperative Housing Association, which owns the project, said any decision to protest Mansfield's decision must come from the association's board of directors.

Rents at Naylor Gardens, 30th st. and Naylor rd., se., now range from $64.85 to $85.70 a month. With the recommended increase they would range from $65 to $85.75.

The increase recommended is about one third of 1 percent, as compared to the 11 percent sought. Putting it another way, the association had asked an increase which would bring in an additional $64,000 a year; the increase recommended will bring in only an extra $1500.

Mansfield explained his decision this way:

He compared 1949 operating costs with those of 1944, first year of operation of the Government-built project. Mansfield said the 1949 costs were 9.14 percent higher.

Then, he said, he took into account an 8 percent increase granted in 1948 and a slight increase allowed in 1949 to compensate for the increased real estate tax rate. When these were added up there wasn't much left of the 9.14 percent difference.

New Attack Made On D. C. Rent Curb

Lifting of District rent control was urged yesterday by Robert G. Van Vranken, president of the Builders, Owners and Managers Association of Metropolitan Washington.

New construction has alleviated the housing shortage, Van Vranken said, with vacant apartments "by the score" coming on the market daily in the Washington area. In the past 10 years, he stated.

Maryland U. to Raise GI Rents Despite Protests of Wives

By The Associated Press

The University of Maryland still plans to raise the fee this summer on apartments it rents out to GI students despite a protest by 66 wives.

Dean Geary Eppley, director of student welfare, said today the university must go through with its plan.

"These building units must be made financially self-sustaining," he declared. "Provision must be made for replacement.

"Under the sliding scale that was in effect, students who worked in part-time jobs outside were really paying for other students who didn't work. The American way is to pay for what you get."

The university has 13 war surplus barracks buildings on the campus, each divided into eight apartments—a total of 104. Present rentals range from $22.50 to $42.50 a month, depending on the student's ability to pay.

Starting July 1, the university plans to charge $33 a month for the efficiency apartments with no bedroom and $36 a month for those with one bedroom.

Wives of 66 of the veteran students addressed a letter of protest to Dean Eppley, complaining that most of them try to live on $120 a month and that they simply could not afford the doubled rent in some cases.

"I haven't had time to go over the protest thoroughly," Eppley said, "but a glance at the list of names shows several wives of men graduating in June. They won't be affected by the change anyway."

Some tenants will get a rent cut, he pointed out. But there will be some who will have to pay $33 instead of $22.50.

Blair House Neighbors Fight for Property

Lafayette Square neighbors of President Truman yesterday urged Congress to reject a pending House bill authorizing the Government to purchase all the private property in the square bounded by Pennsylvania ave., Jackson pl., 17th and H sts. nw.

Jess Larsen, head of the General Services Administration, testified before the House Public Works Committee the legislation is primarily aimed at prompt Government purchase of the building at Pennsylvania ave. and Jackson pl., which, until recently, was occupied by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

But Larsen admitted the Government has a long-range plan for acquiring all private property in the Blair House block to insure it be in the character and atmosphere of the White House.

The Carnegie building has been offered for public sale. Matthew G. Lepley, a local architect, disclosed he represents a corporation which is ready to buy the Carnegie property, and within 12 months erect an office building on the site.

He said his client, whose name he would not reveal was perfectly willing to sell or lease it to the Government or a private tenant.

He urged the bill be killed, pointing out it would pay the District $40.000 annually in taxes.

Those appearing to demand the measure be amended to cover only the Carnegie building included: D. Lewis Meriam, vice president of the Brookings Institute; J. T. Sanders, of the National Grange; Dr. Robert Dubose, assistant administrator of the Association of American Colleges

The committee, headed by Representative Whittington (D., Miss.), also considered a letter from Mrs. Truxton Beale, owner of the historic Decatur house on Jackson pl. She urged that her property not be "destroyed" and Whittington directed his staff to prepare an amendment to "protect" her.

Under questioning by Representative Pickett (D., Tex.), Larsen said he did not believe negotiations with the National Theater and Academy for lease of the old Belasco Theater would work out.

Pickett commented he did not think neon lights and the "theater atmosphere" so close to the White House would be appropriate.

To reopen the Belasco on a nonsegregated basis, he said, "would stir up another nonsegregated argument in the District."

1000 Students Take Mass Physical Test

More than 1000 Maryland college students have received intensive "assembly line" physical examinations recently, in the State's first attempt at elaborate mass medical checks.

Results of the "polyphasic" tests aren't in yet.

But officials report the comprehensive exam, including X-rays of heart and lungs, a check on height, weight, vision, hearing and blood pressure, urinalysis and blood test, can be completed in 14 minutes.

With a staff of 12 technicians and 18 clerical workers, the examined patients were turned off the end of the line at the rate of one a minute, according to Frederick County Health Officer Dr. Carroll E. Easterday.

The County Health Department sponsored the tests in cooperation with the State Health Department and United States Public Health Service. They were made on students at Hood College, St. Joseph's College, and Mount St. Mary's College, and the Maryland State School for the Deaf in Frederick.

The 1022 volunteers, all between 15 and 24 years of age, were tested for heart and lung abnormalities, tuberculosis, fungus and pyogenic infections, nephritis, and diabetes, according to Dr. Easterday. Blood samples were examined for type, Rh factor, anemia and Wassermann reaction.

Major objectives of the mass exams, Dr. Easterday said were:

1. To find out how college students stack up against a cross section of the rest of the population.

He explained the Maryland results will be compared with a similar series made last year on nearly 5000 Richmond, Va., residents from 15 to 80.

2. To discover the cost and practicability of such mass tests on an even larger scale.

Now, Hear This . . .

AUDIOMETER AUDITION—Kathie Stott, a Hood College student, has hearing tested with an audiometer, operated by Warren R. Evans, supervisor of health and physical education in the schools of Frederick County. Miss Stott is the daughter of Navy Captain and Mrs. George W. Stott, 4265 25th st., Arlington, Va.

1949 Treasury Check Forgeries Treble Loss by 'Queer' Money

Forgery of Treasury Department checks in 1949 cost the public more than three times as much as counterfeit bills.

This was disclosed yesterday in the report of Chief E. U. Baughman of the Secret Service to Secretary of the Treasury Snyder.

The losses on forged Treasury checks during the calendar year, Baughman reported, were $2,045,155 on the 30,081 cases "closed" by the Secret Service. However, 13,221 cases were still open on December 31, and new ones are coming in at approximately 2900 a month.

By contrast, Secret Service agents seized $1,418,464 in counterfeit money, but only $651,445 was actually passed to the public. The rest was grabbed by the Secret Service before the counterfeiters and their "shovers" had a chance to dispose of it.

Of the counterfeit money seized, $150,000 was taken in Washington within a few blocks of the Treasury, and five persons arrested. Two were convicted. They were Walter W. Kidwell, sentenced to 10 years in prison, and Eugene H. Creighton, two to seven years. The three others were acquitted after a trial.

In the course of breaking up a postage stamp counterfeiting ring in New York City, the Secret Service uncovered the counterfeiting of $400,000 in American Express traveler's checks of which $150,000 worth had been passed. Though this does not come under its jurisdiction, the Secret Service stopped it.

The Secret Service also completed 7535 cases of forged indorsements on Government bonds, involving $533,085.

In connection with the report, Baughman issued a warning to all persons receiving Government checks that they should keep mail boxes locked. He urged cashers of such checks to insist on "good identification" before paying money on them.

"The last indorser of a forged Government check," he pointed out, "is the loser."

During 1949, the Secret Service completed 41,244 criminal and 1727 noncriminal investigations. These resulted in jail sentences totaling about 2515 years, and fines aggregating $28,196.

GI Joes, who promised each other at their discharge to "meet in five years" are certainly keeping their promises this year.

D. C. Legion Post Against U.S. Bonus For Any Veterans

A local American Legion post has voted unanimously against payment of a Federal bonus to World War II veterans, it was disclosed yesterday.

G. Bowdoin Craighill, jr., commander of Augustus F. Gardner Post No. 18, said members of his post believe the bonus "unwise in principle and a danger to the Nation's economy."

The post also voted against a bonus after World War I.

$44,438 Asked In County for Recreation

The Prince Georges County Recreation Board yesterday asked the county commissioners for a $44,438 appropriation for Prince Georges recreation program in the 1950-1951 fiscal year.

It was the first time the newly-formed board has presented an appropriation for inclusion in the budget. Set up a year ago to provide a diversified county program, the recreation board has received $10,000 from the Prince Georges County commissioners.

The bulk of its requested appropriation—$36,156—is to be used for salaries.

In other actions, the commissioners yesterday named County Agricultural Agent P. E. Clark as director of civilian defense, and approved the appointment of Mrs. Mary Ellen Eusebio as a public health nurse.

The commissioners also turned over $2,090,517 to the school board for its eight-million-dollar construction program. This $2,090,517 is the second installment from the State for the program.

In a letter the local government committee of the Prince Georges County League of Women Voters asked the commissioners to present its forthcoming budget in a form easier to understand. Public hearings on the budget probably will be held the end of the month.

French Ship Ready to Take 50 Gift Planes

Norfolk, Va., March 7 (AP).—The little aircraft carrier Dixmude, the French tricolor whipping from her mainmast, arrived here today to take a load of war planes to her homeland.

Some 50 American fighters and bombers will be loaded aboard the carrier during the next several days. The first weapons in a one billion dollar flow of arms from the United States to strengthen western Europe against possible Russian aggression.

Wednesday, elaborate ceremonies will be held on the carrier. These will be attended by officials of the French Embassy in Washington and representatives of the United States National Defense Department and State Department. A half dozen Congressmen also will by down for the ceremonies.

The Dixmude, which came here from Toulon, will remain in Norfolk 10 days or two weks, Consul Pierre Schmitz said. During that period, United States Navy pilots will teach French pilots how to fly the Corsair fighters and Helldiver bombers the Dixmude will take home.

Montgomery School Board Proposes $21 Million Program

A five-year 21 million dollar school construction program for Montgomery County was proposed by the county board of education yesterday.

The program, released by Assistant Superintendent of Schools Richard E. Carpenter, calls for expenditure of $7,100,000 during the 1950-1951 fiscal year.

Carpenter also summarized the progress of the $5,004,000 construction program authorized by the county council for the current fiscal year.

26 Projects Completed

Of 32 projects authorized by the council, 26 were either completed or under contract as of February 20, Carpenter said. Three have been temporarily abandoned and another three are not yet contracted for.

For the coming fiscal year, 30 new projects are listed in addition to eight now under contract, for which additional funds will be needed for completion.

The $7,100,000 figure for 1950-1951 construction purposes does not include, Carpenter pointed out, funds needed for advance site purchases, advance planning, purchasing supplies and equipment and for reconditioning buildings.

May Level Off

Carpenter estimated elementary school enrollments may level off after 1958, but that high schools would remain crowded at least until 1962.

Although not included in next year's proposals, consideration is being given to construction of a separate plant for Montgomery Junior College, Carpenter said. The college is now housed in temporary buildings on the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School grounds.

Army Experts Aid Baltimore Smog Survey

By The Associated Press

The Army announced yesterday experts from its chemical center at Edgewood, Md., are helping public officials of Baltimore and the nearby colunties to survey a local "smog" problem.

Samples of gas from industrial smokestacks will be tested. The nature and amount of impurities in the atmosphere will be analyzed, and the effect of each impure substance upon a human being may be determined eventually by the tests.

Specialists from the Army Industrial Hygiene Laboratory and the Chemical Corps Technical Command and Medical Division at Edgewood will use techniques and equipment developed to detect dangerous gas concentrations near plants producing chemical warfare materials.

Col. Wesley C. Cox is supervising the work. The Army said its assistance was requested by Baltimore City officials.

Blunt Plans GOP Race for Maryland Governor

Baltimore, March 7 (AP).—Royden A. Blunt, Baltimore industrialist and Howard County farmer, will file as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor March 16, an associate said today.

Blunt

Blunt becomes the first Republican to make known his intention formally, although State Senator Roy Tasco of Montgomery County has indicated he will announce his candidacy next week, and State Senator Harry T. Phoebus of Somerset County has promised an "important announcement" soon.

Blunt's anouncement was made by Stanley Scherr, a party stalwart and one of his supporters, as Blunt is in the Caribbean observing tactical exercises of the armed forces.

Scherr said before Blunt left, he had become "tremendously encouraged by his contacts with the rank and file of the Republican Party, as well as leaders throughout the city and State.

Scherr said Blunt declared he would make a formal statement of his policies when he files as a candidate with the secretary of State.

Fight to Name Virginia Area Judge Looms

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, March 7.—Supporters of two odds-on candidates for associate judge of the Alexandria-Fairfax-Prince William Circuit today prepared to battle it out before a Democratic caucus Wednesday night.

Aspirants for the newly authorized job in the sixteenth Judicial Circuit are Trial Justice Harry Carrico of Fairfax, and Arthur W. Sinclair, a Manassas attorney.

Carrico has been indorsed by the bar associations of Alexandria and Fairfax. He will be supported by Senator Andrew W. Clarke of Alexandria, and Delegates Armistead L. Boothe, Alexandria, and Edwin Lynch, Fairfax.

Delegate Frank P. Moncure of Stafford, will nominate Sinclair. Moncure says the Prince William Bar Association, "with all its members present, unanimously" indorsed his candidate.

Election of former State Senator William D. Medley to the associate judgeship for Arlington County, which makes up the Thirty-fifth Judicial Circuit, is assured. He is indorsed by the County Bar Association and supported by Senator Charles R. Fenwick and Delegates J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm, of Arlington.

In other developments of the General Assembly today:

The House passed the Fenwick bill to permit cities, as well as counties and towns, to participate in combinations of localities to establish hospital and health center commissions.

Governor Battle received the Clarke bill to provide an additional corporation court judge for cities of 60,000 or more (including Alexandria), if the Supreme Court certifies there is a need.

The Senate Committee on Counties, Cities and Towns placed on its docket a new charter for Falls Church, already passed by the House.

Bill to Halt Annexations Goes to Virginia Senate

Richmond, Va., March 7 (AP).—The original House compromise plan on annexation emerged late today from the Virginia Senate committee on counties, cities and towns.

The plan would halt all annexation cases until July 1, 1952, while a special commission makes a thorough study of annexation. The committee killed the Swanson amendment to permit pending cases also to be stayed.

Senate Version Passed

As the assembly drove for adjournment Saturday:

1. The House passed the Senate version of the reassessment bill recommended by the Gray tax study commission. As watered down and passed, the bill enables the State department of taxation to study local assessments and determine whether the locality deserves to share in State equalization funds for education and school construction.

2. Committees killed the Guy House bill to prohibit any locality from taking the name, "City of Hampton Roads"; the Burton Senate bill to enable county boards of supervisors to elect school boards from lists supplied by school electoral boards; and the Hillard Senate bill requiring automobile dealers to spell out the charges in installment sales contracts.

Tax Bill Heads For Action

Meanwhile, the Byrd automatic tax reduction bill headed for the floor of the House of Delegates Wednesday, with prospects of plenty of administration support. Also there was a strong prospect that the Senate would take up the 599-million-dollar budget bill Wednesday.

The "reassessment" bill now goes to the Governor.

By a vote of 10 to four, the House Education Committee today killed the Burton Senate bill which would have provided a new method of electing school board members in the counties.

The bill, sponsored by Senator Frank P. Burton of Patrick, passed the Senate easily after two other bills on the same subject died in committee. Burton's bill would have permitted selection of school board members by boards of supervisors from lists offered by school trustee electoral boards.

Fairfax Defers $10.5 Million School Bond Referendum

Fairfax County's $10,500,000 off-again-on-again school bond referendum was put off again yesterday—this time possibly until Falls Church's annexation suit is settled.

The county school board asked Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown to hand back its petitions seeking a referendum without setting an election date. More than 3000 registered voters signed the petitions.

The calling of a referendum during Falls Church's annexation litigation "is inadvisable and possibly futile," the board's resolution to the judge asserted.

Reluctantly Approved

It was an action approved with reluctance on the board's part. "I certainly want the public to know that the board isn't just deliberately throwing in the sponge," declared F. W. Robinson, chairman. "We're doing it on advice of legal counsel."

Part of that counsel was from the board's attorney, John Alexander. Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh B. Marsh and the board's New York bond attorneys concurred. The latter wrote:

". . . whatever the school board does in this respect now will probably turn out to be useless."

No Litigation Angle

The referendum is apparently snagged because both county officials and the bond attorneys must certify "that no litigation is pending or threatened affecting boundaries of the county of its power to levy and collect taxes on all property in the county for payment of the bonds in question."

Parties who must do the certifying have told the board they could not do it in the face of Falls Church's annexation suit.

The board, P-TA's, the School Emergency Association, and interested individuals have been working since last fall for the $10,500,000 bond issue. Back of this is the county's present overcrowded school situation and an ever-increasing enrollment.

With the referendum halted for the time being, the board instructed its attorney yesterday to figure out some way to get around the problem "at the earliest possible moment."

The action came after Newell Blair, an official of the emergency association, urged the board to insist on further legal and financial study to solve the blocked referendum. Blair, a lawyer, said there were "several outs" to be considered.

One such is the possibility of an early decision on the annexation suit, it was revealed. The board was told unofficially yesterday that the case may be heard early next month by an annexation tribunal.

Italian Skipper Reported Killed By Yugoslavs

Venice, Italy, March 7 (AP).—Crewmen of an Italian fishing vessel said today a Yugoslav patrol boat officer shot their skipper to death last night after an argument in the Adriatic Sea.

The incident appeared to be another chapter in the long, bitter quarrel between Italy and Yugoslavia over Adriatic fishing rights.

The crewmen said the Yugoslav killed Capt. Dino Bullo when he refused to obey an order to follow the patrol boat into the Yugoslav port of Parenzo. Bullo said his ship was in open waters.

The crewmen said their ship, the San Marco, was stopped some 25 miles west of the Yugoslav coast.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Rome said no official report of the incident had been received. He indicated Italy will protest strongly to Yugoslavia when the facts are officially known.

The spokesman said Yugoslavia has seized some 100 Italian fishing boats in the Adriatic over the past 11 months.

House Votes to Pay For Missing Fossil

Walter E. Parks of Lincoln, Neb., appeared yesterday at long last to be nearing victory in his fight to collect from the Government for the loss of his fossil cycad.

The National Park Service borrowed the cycad, a fossilized plant specimen of the geologic age, back in 1933 for display at the Chicago World Fair. The fossil came up missing and Parks rejected a replacement.

The House voted unanimously yesterday to pay him $125 in full payment of all claims against the Government. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Fugitive proceedings against Harry M. Crain, 51, former State Department employe, in Municipal Court were continued for 30 days yesterday. He is charged with embezzlement in Colorado.

Crain last week was treated for an overdose of sleeping capsules taken after he learned of the charge.

Colorado authorities have charged him with taking $2400 in student funds of which he was administrator while serving as associate professor of English at the Colorado School of Mines.

Theater Opening

The Gayety opened its doors Monday night as a legitimate theater, with an offering of the Besier play "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." When the curtain went up, a packed audience burst into sustained applause, registering the keenness of their pleasure over the return of the theater to Washington. The play wasn't the thing; it was the theater. May the enterprise prosper, and so pave the way for further enterprise of the sort, with the view of making the Capital the theatrical center that is warranted both by the taste of the people and the position of this city in the cultural life of the Republic.

Minority President

Senator Taft finds himself in strange company in fighting the Lodge-Gossett resolution, for the most vehement opposition to date has come from the special pressure groups. These groups fear that if the electoral votes were distributed among the candidates for President and Vice President in proportion to the popular vote cast in each State, their opportunity for bringing pressure upon the major parties in the key States would be minimized. Senator Taft fears that this proposed change in the Constitution would be "fatal to the hope of electing a Republican President if the election is in any way close." Both complaints obviously reflect selfish interests that ought to be put aside in passing upon the merits of a proposal to correct a serious defect in our electoral system.

Mr. Taft fears that, under the proposed system, the GOP would not gain enough electoral votes in the South to make up for its sharing of electoral votes in the big States of the North. This seems to us an unwarranted fear, for the reason that the Democratic Party, in order to win, must carry a number of large States in the East, Middle West and West. And the unit system of counting electoral votes swings a big State to the Democrats on a small margin as easily as it does to the Republicans. In the close election of 1948, for example, the Democratic Party carried California, with 25 electoral votes; Illinois, with 28; Massachusetts, with 16, and Ohio, with 25; but the Republicans carried Indiana, with 13 electoral votes; Michigan, with 19; New Jersey, with 16; New York, with 47, and Pennsylvania with 35. The point is this: the net effect of the voting under the present system was to give Mr. Truman 303 electoral votes to 189 for Mr. Dewey; under the Lodge-Gossett resolution, the division would have been: Truman, 258; Dewey, 221.4.

What Senator Taft seems to be complaining about is that, in unusual circumstances, the resolution might deprive the Republicans of the opportunity of putting a minority President into the White House. In presenting his proposal to the Senate, Mr. Lodge pointed out that a shift of about 30,000 popular votes in three States would have given the election to Governor Dewey, in spite of a plurality of nearly two million popular votes for Mr. Truman. It is precisely this evil that the resolution is designed to prevent. Does Senator Taft openly and candidly favor the election of minority Presidents? That certainly seems to be the implication of his opposition. We can think of few worse political disasters that may befall the country under the present system than to have a minority President. For that matter, the election of a man to this position without a popular majority behind him would be a calamity for the President himself and for the party which sponsored him.

It is true, of course, that the Lodge-Gossett resolution would not entirely eliminate the danger of electing a minority President. The fact that each State has two electoral votes (corresponding to its two Senators) which do not represent population would make it possible for a candidate to win with fewer popular votes than his rival even under the proposed amendment. But the greatest danger arising from the unit rule of counting electoral votes would be eliminated. We do not see how any man can oppose the amendment on this ground unless he is willing to admit that he favors the election of a minority President, if only his party can win. To us, this seems to be one of the strongest arguments for the change.

The Coplon Case

Miss Judith Coplon, the former confidential employe of the Department of Justice, and M. Valentin Gubitchev, a Russian employe of the United Nations, have been found guilty by the jury in the New York Federal District Court of conspiracy to engage in espionage in the interest of the Soviet Union. There is no doubt that the verdict is in accordance with the facts presented at the trial; nevertheless there are some disturbing elements about the case.

One is the apparent confusion in the mind of the jury. The jury found Miss Coplon guilty on the charge of attempting to convey secret information to Gubitchev, with the intention of injuring the United States and aiding the Soviet Union, yet acquitted her of the charge of attempting to pass secrets to an unauthorized person. At the same time it held Gubitchev, as an "unauthorized person," guilty of receiving these secrets. We are obliged to agree, for once and most reluctantly, with Gubitchev's attorney, Mr. Pomerantz, that this hardly makes sense. It may be, however, that the jury felt that in Miss Coplon's case the second and fourth counts of the indictment were tautological, that is to say, accused her twice in different language of what was after all a single crime.

Another unfortunate circumstance is in the methods by which the evidence to convict Miss Coplon and M. Gubitchev was obtained. Much of it, as the pretrial hearings showed, was obtained by wiretapping on the part of Government investigating agents. It may be that the corpus of the case could never have been prepared otherwise. Perhaps a point could be made that the serious character of Communist espionage activities in this country justifies the means employed. It may even be that such methods are preferable to those employed in Canada during the investigation of the spy cases, when it was deemed necessary in the interest of public safety to suspend the most fundamental civil rights. Nevertheless, the knowledge that the Government is an interested eavesdropper upon the private conversations of citizens is another reminder of the steadily narrowing area of personal rights. Obviously, the question of when wiretapping is legal and when it is not needs more clarification by the courts.

Finally there is the fact that the trial of Gubitchev is almost without precedent in time of peace. His conviction has made him liable to a sentence of 15 years and a fine of $20,000. If such a sentence is executed, it will certainly lead to further reprisals against Americans now in Russia or in the satellite countries. It is even possible that the identical sentence imposed on Mr. Robert Vogeler by a Hungarian court, which convicted him of an almost identical charge, was itself in the nature of a reprisal for the Gubitchev affair. Nothing it seems to us will be gained by sending Gubitchev to prison, and the sensible thing would be to deport him.

Nor have Americans much reason to be shocked by the discovery that the Soviet nationals who enjoy diplomatic privileges as part of the permanent staff of the United Nations should have used them for the purposes of espionage. It was to be expected in the nature of things that they would do so. And this, it seems to us, is a sufficient commentary upon the blindness of those booster organizations who were so eager that the capital of the United Nations should be located here.

Greek Result

Nobody loves politics more than the Greeks, and the free world will be at one in congratulating them on the free and full election which has just been held. Here is testimony to the success of the American policy in Greece. The result fails to give any one party a firm majority, and a return to the coalition system, which ran Greece prior to the caretaker regime, seems inevitable. This time, however, one or more new parties will probably have a share in the coalition along with the traditional Populists and Liberals. One is the National Progressive Union of the center, led by Nicholas Plastiras, the other the Democratic Society party under George Papandreous. Both are left of the traditional parties, but the political spectrum in Greece is so kaleidoscopic that the exact situation of any of the Greek parties is difficult to define. Personalities are still decisive in Greece, and the present campaign has been a miniature war of personalities.

At the same time the verdict shows a reaction against the mere standpatism of the Populist-Liberal coalition. The demonstration of this is the emergence of General Plastiras, the most extreme of the standard bearers of the left. Upon him the British pinned their hopes when the conflict arose in Greece after the liberation. He had had a political record which fitted him for mediation; he was unequally uncompromising in his opposition to both communism and monarchism; he had made many friends among the refugee population. However, he was unable to bring peace, and Greece was plunged into a bloodbath by the desperate Communist effort to turn Greece into a Russian satellite. Now the Communist Party is outlawed, and it is said that the remaining Communists turned to Plastiras as the least reactionary from their standpoint of the plethora of candidates. Yet any view of the general as a fellow-traveler such as may result from the headlines of the election results as favorable to the "Leftists" would be wide of the truth.

Greece is struggling slowly back to its feet under the beneficent ministrations of the Marshall Plan. No country has been through more travail in the last 10 years. Yet there is a recovery of the spirit as well as the economy of Greece, though its political maturity, as this election proves, is still in the future. The Greeks seemingly cannot get over the habit of swamping their politics with parties and candidates, though the extraordinary turnout on this occasion may have been a celebration of the return to nonsupervised representative government!

Regeneration

There was a European folktale current in the days before Pasteur about a village blacksmith who strangled a rabid animal with his powerful hands but in doing so was bitten. Then the smith, knowing he was doomed and fearful that in his agony he might injure one of his neighbors, chained himself to his own anvil. The story is recalled by the case of Michael Shipkov, the Bulgarian now on trial at Sofia as a spy for the American Legation where he was for a time employed as a translator.

Coincident with Shipkov's trial, the Department of State, in accordance with his own written request, released his affidavit containing the detailed description of the tortures by which he was broken down in the prison of the Security Militia, made to confess to fantastic treasons and crimes, and sent back to the legation as a police spy. The Communist inquisitors made a very serious mistake in assuming that Shipkov's will and self-respect had been so irreparably damaged that he had become their submissive instrument. His story is a remarkable example of the triumph of the spirit over the terrors of the flesh.

Shipkov was tortured by conscience and by the sense of degradation at having in his agony betrayed his friends. The intense spiritual agitation reflected in the statement, the pitiful struggle between terror and honor, make it almost heartbreaking to read. Nevertheless it is a document of great historical importance and of enormous value as propaganda. And it must be a singularly insensitive and unimaginative reader who does not conclude from it that Shipkov was, after all, a singularly courageous man.

Of course, it also throws more light upon the techniques of the notorious "conveyor system" employed by the Communist police. As the Department of State observed in releasing the affidavit, it helps to explain how a confession could have been extorted even from such a man as Cardinal Mindszenty, who had willingly embraced the role of martyr. The tortures to which Shipkov was subjected, in their blending of physical and psychological cruelties, had a satanic ingenuity, far exceeding anything known to Roman or medieval practices or even in the Orient. Most ingenious of all is the possibility of an almost infinite duration, with no hope of rescue by death and almost none of rescue by madness. The whole system is aimed at the destruction of character and of everything understood by personal "integrity."

This is further emphasized by the impersonality of the inquisitors, who are not, says Shipkov, > over-interested in what you tell them. It would appear that the ultimate purpose of this treatment is . . . to deprive you of any will power or private thought or self-esteem, which they achieve remarkably quickly . . . They appear to place importance on the parallel appearance of repentance and self-condemnation . . . I rarely could perceive any personal hatred or enmity for me—contempt certainly but sooner or later an academic detached dealing with an annoying problem . . .

From Shipkov's and other accounts it is apparent that methods of the Communist police have borrowed rather extensively from psychiatric practice and, notwithstanding their inverted object, from the psychology of religious conversion, and this also helps to explain their diabolical efficiency.

Legislative Blackmail

The aviation press is much concerned over the report that a House Appropriations Subcommittee may cut funds for the Civil Aeronautics Board by one million dollars, or nearly 25 percent. The motive for this whopping slash, so the report goes, is some unexplained personal antagonism held by the chairman of the subcommittee for the chairman of the CAB. We hope that this is not the case. The CAB budget request as presented is not sacrosanct, of course, but the CAB is a small agency and could not suffer so drastic a cut without grave impairment of its functions. All commercial aviation would be hampered by a move which crippled the effectiveness of the regulatory commission; the CAB already is 18 months behind on its case work. The least that the public has a right to expect is that the subcommittee will base its recommendations on the merits of the case rather than on any narrow personal considerations.

FEBRUARY WALK

Today,
Some curious way,
I feel that Spring is near;
Just why I do not know.
The trees are bare;
The feel of snow
Is still within the air.
There is no word outspoken,
No visible token—
Unless perhaps the sky
Is just a shade more blue,
The sun more high.

It is a curious thing
To dream of Spring
Upon a February day,
With the chill breath
Frosted—in some such way
As we sense love unspoken,
Perhaps, or life from death,
Without a visible token.

The Herblock Award

Since a personal gesture of mine was apparently misinterpreted in a news story yesterday, I'd like to say something further on it.

Henry M. Busch is a friend of some 17 years standing. He is one of the candidates for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Ohio, where I lived for many years before coming to Washington. I contributed my Broun Award check to Mr. Busch's campaign because he seemed to me to exemplify the spirit of Broun.

I was troubled, however, by a printed account of the matter that made it appear that I had given the money "to a campaign to defeat Senator Robert A. Taft."

I gave this contribution because I am pro-Busch and not because I am anti-Taft or anti-anyone else. Mr. Busch is not even running against Mr. Taft at present. As I said in my letter transmitting the Heywood Broun Award to Mr. Busch: "Because of the man in whose honor the award was made, I think it appropriate that it be spent in the campaign of a fighting liberal."

As editorial cartoonist of an independent newspaper I deal with personalities only as they are involved with issues and principles.

Crime In Washington

I wish to congratulate The Washington Post on the restraint with which it has handled the extraordinary picture of Washington, the Nation's Capital, as a crime-ridden city, obviously governed according to the generally discarded custom of wholesale corruption and protection of the criminal element.

For months I thought that, had I been the editor of The Post, I would have put a one-line editorial in the paper each day saying, simply, "Barrett Must Go." Then I decided that this was a mistake and thought that the editorial should read, "The Commissioners and Barrett Must Go."

Now I realize that the editor of The Post is wiser than I. Clearly, The Post cannot carry a one-line editorial each day saying, "Congress Must Go." People would misunderstand. Yet it is obvious that Congress alone is responsible for the sorry state of affairs in Washington.

I hope, therefore, that the members of the House committee conducting the current comic opera "crime inquiry" realize that they are exposing the ineptitude of Congress and nothing more.

It is not enough to say that if Washington were allowed to govern itself the present situation could easily be ended. To put it this way is to imply that the sole question for Congress to ponder is whether to allow self-government or not. The real question is: Shall Washington continue to be a disgrace to the Nation? Congress can clean up Washington or divest itself of responsibility for Washington. So long as the status quo remains we can only conclude that Congress revels in the life of a corrupt city.

GEORGE D. BRADEN.

Although corruption should not be allowed to exist in the District of Columbia Police Department, nevertheless it seems ridiculous that a congressional committee should be required to investigate matters which are municipal in character. The members of the House District Subcommittee investigating crime could be devoting their time to the study of matters which pertain to the country as a whole or to the members of their particular constituencies if the District had self government.

Worthless Agreement

The February 11 issue of The Tablet, one of Britain's better weeklies, poses a practical question for those who advocate that new efforts be made to reach some agreement with Russia and thus terminate the "cold war."

Writing about what happened at Yalta as told by Edward Stettinius, one of our representatives there, The Tablet said:

"It is like Mr. Chamberlain waving his piece of paper saying: 'It is peace in our time.' But there was more excuse for Chamberlain because Hitler had only written Mein Kempf, which was not a body of deliberate doctrine. But Stalin and his associates were all devotees of the Marx-Lenin creed, whose exponents had for half a century made no secret either of their views or their techniques . . . it took them a long time to believe their incredible good fortune that they had to deal with well-intentioned but naive American statesmen like the President, Mr. Harry Hopkins and Mr. Edward Stettinius, and the sole survivor Mr. James Byrnes, men who had never read the Communist classics."

Are the current advocates of renewing conferences with Russia merely confirming the Russian mind in its estimate of American simplicity which was so clearly evidenced at Yalta? Or more pointedly, if the conferences produce an agreement with Russia, what is its worth?

Child Day Care Centers

I believe there will never be enough emphasis on the necessity of maintaining the Child Day Care Centers of Washington. The nursery care which they provide for children of working mothers is planned and carried out in the most admirable manner by efficient and devoted teachers. To the working mothers who have to earn a living for the family because they are widowed, or divorced, or because the head of the family is sick or without employment, the Child Day Care Centers are an absolute necessity. The centers do not function as a charity, everyone pays according to one's income, but there is a certain amount that the District government contributes and it is about that amount (so small when compared to some items) that one has to put up a fight every year!

We know that juvenile delinquency stems mainly from an unhappy childhood. The Child Day Care Centers contribute unquestionably to the happiness of the children as well as to the peace of mind of their mothers. Are they then not a worthwhile project, deserving permanency? Other large cities provide scores of centers. Washington, the Capital of the world, has only six centers. Let us keep them permanently.

Movie Taxes

The movie house efforts to eliminate the excise tax has a deeper purpose than "helping" the people by depriving their Treasury of necessary income.

The manager of a third run theater here was asked if he was signing a commitment to reduce the admission the full 20 percent. He answered "our prices here will come down 5 cents." His price now is 40 cents (with tax) and as his 5-cent reduction is 12½ percent of present total, the elimination of the excise tax will increase his gross by 7½.

This plan to increase profits by lowering prices is to be done by cutting the throat of the United States Treasury, the same Treasury that went in debt to feed the hungry of Europe.

Shipkov's Ordeal

In all humility I decided to put down in writing some of the thoughts and feelings that have lived with me in the recent days ever since it became known that an old college mate and dear friend, Michael Shipkov, is on his way to join the endless list of martyrs in my unfortunate country—Bulgaria.

I met Michael Shipkov in 1924—my first year in Robert College, Istanbul. As his whole family had been educated, there he was sent over from Sofia at the early age of 10 and had already been there three years when the new crop of about 14 young Bulgarian boys, of which I was one, entered the gates of that great educational institution. He was graduated in 1930 and during those six years, although in different classes, I can say that I came to know him well and was flattered to be a friend of his.

The student body of Robert College comprised the youth of many and varied lands and along with the high ideals that we were taught to cultivate and the fine personal examples that were set before us by men of great integrity who had devoted their lives to service of humanity, our contact with boys of different nations and creeds taught us tolerance. A Robert College man—and they are to be found in every land—carries with him through his whole life an indelible stamp that nothing can erase. The alma mater can really be proud of many of the graduates. Michael Shipkov is one of them. He no longer belongs to the Bulgarian people alone, the present Communist government having nothing to do with the majority of the Bulgarians, but to the democratic people of the whole world. As a friend I can't help but grieve for him, but as a Bulgarian I am proud that one of my people stands out as a high example of courage and integrity of character.

Michael Shipkov is a doomed man. Knowing him as I do, I think that I may be allowed to say that he is a satisfied man. He knows that he has lived up to his ideals and his Christian beliefs. He is giving his life for a cause that he believed in and worked for. He loved life and lived it fully, but he proved that he would not tolerate life at a certain price.

One more fine man falls in the crusade of the free democratic world against an international band of brutes whose ultimate goal is the enslavement of the whole world. One more human torch is lighted to show more clearly to the free men what communism is and what are its methods.

What People Run From

One Man's Theory

THE EUROPEAN visitor, who had lived in many countries, had a theory about the American rush and dither that so overwhelm and bewilder most visiting foreigners. He sensed something beneath this feverish living that he thought Americans should be looking into if they were to justify the hopes of much of mankind.

Why the big bustle? So he had wondered on arriving. In successive months of residence he continued to wonder. Why the scramble to go places, meet people, do things, keep jumping, be in a crowd? Why the reluctance to be caught in the company of one's self?

A second impression was the widespread concern about mental illness. A student of this subject, he tried to find why this affliction was more prevalent in the United States than elsewhere—for so it had seemed to him. But that is a vague field for statistics. Interpretations vary. National standards and procedures differ.

Yet the fact remained that the National Committee For Mental Hygiene called mental health this country's "No. 1 health problem," one that affected more people than all other types of illness combined. And this in a young, vigorous, prosperous, presumably happy Nation!

THE VISITOR, in the analytical manner of a Greek educated in France, began to reason out his observations. People here were either running after something or away from something. Since they seemed to lack so little, materially at least, they were not in pursuit, rather in escape. But from what? Could it be that some one deep seated frustration contributed to this mental health problem, about which so much was heard?

He realized that all humanity faced this hazard. Who wasn't frustrated? Nevertheless he couldn't get away from the feeling that Americans ought to be basically happier, at least more serene. He felt that something deeper than industrial competition, urban life, rising living standards, lay back of this high tension existence—on which so many ailments, physical as well as mental, were blamed.

The observer also had been struck by the "high potential intellect" of the people of the United States. In this country—possibly out of the racial melting pot—had developed this strong new potential of mind.

And how was this being used? In a one-sided, material, factual way—a way that didn't exercise any mental muscles. That was evidenced in the general level of culture, in the hectic efforts of mass media to appeal to the 12-year-old mind. Yet whenever he talked to the so-called man in the street he sensed a latent vigor of intellect not being challenged.

PEOPLE'S MINDS were crammed with facts, but facts that were not digested, not assimilated into the personality. The widespread American reverence for "hard facts" had impressed him. But how little exploration beyond the frontiers of facts! And this knowledge of facts, while it might lead to discoveries, inventions, solving of practical problems, did not give any activity to the intellectual urge, the great primary force man had developed in evolution.

This lay unsatisfied, suppressed, making people restless, impelling them to a futile, frantic search for a substitute to fill the gap. This was back of their ruthless spasmodic rush into doing—and away from being.

When would Americans head up to this national frustration? The visitor was earnest, almost evangelistic. It was not a matter for individuals to solve by resolving to be more mental or to stay home and read good books. Actually good books also were often an escape—an escape into facts.

No. This had to be attacked differently, by educators, psychologists, psychiatrists. Also by parents, too many of whom now sought to create the matter-of-fact atmosphere in the home, to prevent their children from becoming dreamers. Study and research were necessary, perhaps a revolution in educational methods. But this must be done if Americans were to be saved from more frustration, more running in circles, more mental illness. It had to be done if the Nation were to generate the light expected of it on world ignorance and disorder.

GWU Discrimination

It is a truly noteworthy achievement when a 21-year-old man wins the doctor of philosophy degree. Such is the remarkable accomplishment of Habeeb Bacchus at George Washington University.

The Washington Post reports that Dr. Bacchus is a graduate of Howard University. This fact, coupled with the distinction of his being the youngest Ph.D. in the history of George Washington, gives me a feeling of personal satisfaction. For I, too, am a Howard graduate, and am very happy to see my fellow alumni do well.

Seemingly, Howard gave Dr. Bacchus a quite adequate foundation in his undergraduate work there. Certainly there are other graduates of Howard who could do as well academically at George Washington as Dr. Bacchus obviously has done. But those Howard graduates who are American Negro citizens are denied admission to George Washington purely on the basis of a false race concept.

Matter Of Fact

Rebirth Of A Nation

BONN, Germany — Probably the births and rebirths of nations are never superficially dramatic. If you read Senator Maclay's diary, you will find that the members of our first Congress were as much preoccupied with the difficulties of getting their washing done in New York, as with the great problems of the new American republic. Certainly there is nothing very stirring, on the surface, about the rebirth of Germany that is going on here in Bonn.

In this little old university town, the ministries are crowded into battered old requisitioned houses. The civil servants and less privileged politicians huddle in grim boarding houses. The Bundestag — the parliament — meets in a reconstructed teachers college, to which an airy but jerrybuilt legislative chamber has been hastily added.

The 400 or so lawyers and trades union officials, farmers and businessmen, all earnestly, sometimes angrily debating the new laws of the new Germany, offer a spectacle as outwardly ordinary as a crowd in a railroad station. These rather tired, middle-aged disillusioned men and women, wear their almost always shapeless and shabby clothes as though these were the uniforms of the new times. The picture and its details are alike, blurred and a little sad.

YET IF you talk to enough of these people who have assembled to build a new nation in Germany, a kind of drama begins to emerge. Perhaps, as drama, it is a little negative. As Chancellor Adenauer bleakly tells his visitors, Germans now at least "know what to avoid." The Bonn parliamentarians have experienced inflation, economic crisis, the false pageantry of Nazism, the delusive excitement of victory, and the terrible reality of total defeat. They now have the somewhat unexciting aim of "not going through any of that again."

The symbol of their determination, and the apparent proof that this determination is shared by the German people, is the domination of the Bundestag by the center. Elsewhere in Europe, the desperate process of the polarization of politics around the extremes still continues. Here in Bonn, the struggle of the two great center parties, the Christian Democrats and the Social Democrats, is the stuff of German politics. Much has been written about the revival of German nationalism. The Hedlers and the Remers are undoubtedly there, on the right of the Bundestag chamber—just as Senator Wherry and Senator McKellar are always on view in Washington. So too is a notably tiny Communist fraction. On balance, however, the extremists are less conspicuous and influential in the Bundestag at Bonn than in our own Congress.

Indeed, after a couple of dozen interviews, one begins to suspect the existence of some sort of historic law. From the time of the unification of France under Richelieu until the final defeat of Napoleon, the French sought to overrun Europe on the average of once every 30 or 40 years. In 1815, at Paris, Prince Blucher used the very phrases about French aggressiveness that General Koenig has more recently applied to the Germans in his battles with General Clay. But the defeat of Napoleon none the less marked the end of French imperialism in Europe.

IN THE same way, the defeat of Hitler and the instructive devastation of Germany can perhaps mark the end of the German aggressiveness — the national dynamism — that was released by the unification of Germany under Napoleon's pressure. Certainly it would be difficult to imagine any government more lacking the will to conquest than this government at Bonn. At the same time, it must be expected that political poisons will flood Germany again if this Bonn government does not somehow work. The domestic difficulties, of improvizing a new administration, recruiting a new civil service, and solving the most appalling economic problems, are unimaginably great. Perhaps this government will not work after all.

To this observer, however, it appears an even greater danger that the allies will not let the Bonn experiment succeed. The whole political structure has just been convulsed by the rage of the Saar question. Those who regard this convulsion as a dangerously "nationalist" manifestation should recall the fury of the people of Paris, when the allies of 1815 merely decided to return to their owners the works of art that Napoleon had stolen from every capital in Europe.

The Bonn experiment can probably be successful if the new German government is allowed to act as a true government. But it will surely fail if this new government is made to seem a mere vehicle for continuing the punishment of Germany for the crime of the war.

Senate Fight Over DP Bill May Continue Weeks Longer

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Administration leaders in the Senate yesterday failed in three separate efforts to break through a talkathon on the displaced persons bill after eight days of debate on the long-delayed measure.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) held the Senate in overtime session and warned he will spend three or four weeks on the measure if necessary to put it through.

The Senate finally adjourned overnight at 7:21 p. m. after a point of no quorum by Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) failed to produce a majority of Senators.

Earlier, Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) blocked each of Lucas' efforts to limit debate on the bill, including a proposal that the limit on speeches not take effect for eight more days.

Langer said he would continue to object until the Senate Judiciary Committee's continuing hearings on the DP program are printed. The transcripts of the hearings run into several large volumes. Senate Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) said the hearings will run another week and it would take at least a week to get them printed.

Lucas called the impasse a "filibuster" on Monday, when Langer forced an early recess of the Senate in his absence.

An angry exchange between Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) and Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.) marked yesterday's debate, with each charging the other with misstating facts.

Eastland was twice required under Senate rules to take his seat after charging Lehman made "untruthful" statements about a speech Eastland made last week.

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) called Eastland to order under Senate Rule 19, forbidding one Senator from imputing unworthy conduct to another. Neely said Eastland in effect called Lehman a "liar."

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), presiding, told Eastland to take his seat, but each time the Senate permitted him to proceed "in order."

Lehman, a supporter of the Kilgore substitute liberalizing the displaced persons law, charged Eastland made 12 "misstatements" in a speech last week criticizing the substitute and administration of the present DP law.

Lehman said he did not accuse Eastland of making deliberate misstatements, but with making "overstatements" in the heat of debate, "which could only be called misstatements of fact."

Eastland accused Lehman of "a deliberate untruth." After he had twice been ordered to take his seat, Eastland renewed the charge, saying Lehman had presented "a tissue of falsehoods deliberately made."

McCarran, whose committee version of the DP bill is opposed by the Administration leadership, said he wanted to get a vote today in order to keep an engagement out of town. Failing a vote today, he proposed Lucas lay the bill aside until April 4.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), one of the authors of the liberalized substitute bill, offered an amendment designed, he said, to shorten the debate.

The amendment stresses the DP screening functions of visa officers and immigration officials as well as the displaced persons commission. Ferguson said it emphasized the three-way check already made on displaced persons, placing the burden of proof on DPs to show they are worthy of citizenship.

Year's Work on Farms In U. S. Urged for DP's

DP farm hands are "morally bound" to stay on United States farms for at least one year, the Rev. Aloysius J. Wycislo, director of the National Catholic Resettlement Council, told 22 foreign editors yesterday at a meeting in the McAlpin Hotel in New York.

Father Wycislo said the DPs sent to work on farms would succeed "in far greater measure if they were really and genuinely farmers.' The DP should remember that "if it were not for the assurance signed by the American sponsor farmer he would still be in a DP camp in Germany or Austria living a life of wretched and unwanted exile."

The Rev. Harold Nott, diocesan director for the Richmond, Va., diocese, praised The Washington Post for a series of articles analyzing the DP program in Maryland and Virginia.

"Such fine articles in the secular press," he said, "will do much to help us all carry on our work of charity to these unfortunate people overseas. The Post stories "have had a splendid effect in the Richmond diocese," Father Nott said.

Plenty of Coffee Is Foreseen For Next Year, But at a Price

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

There's going to be plenty of coffee for the next 12 months, but don't expect prices to go lower.

That's the lowdown that experts of the General Foods Corp. yesterday gave the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee that is studying the high cost of living. The Senate group is headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa).

George V. Robbins, who buys the green coffee that is used for the Maxwell House brand, testified that there is a "statistical" shortage of coffee. By that, he said, he meant that there will be plenty for United States consumers, but the price will be high. Some parts of the world, which cannot afford the new prices, will go without, he asserted.

Up 23 Cents at Retail

Coffee has gone up at retail about 23 cents since last September, Vice President Edwin T. Gibson of General Foods said. But, in the same time, the price of the green coffee has gone up about 28½ cents, he added.

Coffee keeps him awake nights, Gibson said—not from drinking it, but from worrying about its price gyrations. He testified that his company also puts out Postum, a coffee substitute for persons who can't sleep because of caffeine.

Instead of increased income as a result of the recent boost in prices, "the recent rise in green coffee prices has produced only headaches and less business," Gibson said.

For some reason, consumers have been buying about 15 percent less coffee since coffee started its rise, both witnesses said. That, asserted Gibson, is one reason for his sleeplessness.

"We have a boss who is sterner than our stockholders," he said, "and that's the housewife."

Disagree on Supplies

Gillette and the committee counsel, Paul Hadlick, disagreed with General Foods figures on coffee supplies. Both asserted conditions had improved in the coffee areas since last October, and that the outlook was brighter.

Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) who has been concerned over the storage of food surpluses in this country, seemed intrigued by a crop in which there was a shortage.

"How long will coffee keep in storage?" Aiken asked during the discussion of heavy buying by housewives when prices started up last fall.

"When packed in cans such as Maxwell House uses, it will keep a long time," responded Gibson. Then, turning to Gillette, he remarked, "You'll forgive one plug, won't you?"

"We always have room for commercials," Gillette responded.

Gibson wasn't so kind later, however. When Senator Milton R. Young (R., N. Dak.) suggested that perhaps a recent "leveling off" in coffee prices was due to the activities of the Gillette committee, Gibson replied:

"I'd like to pay you that compliment, but I hardly think so." He said it was due entirely to economics

Imports Cut U. S. Trade Gap

By The Associated Press

More imports and fewer exports pushed United States foreign trade closer toward a balance in January.

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that January imports totaled $622,700,000, a gain of $17,600,000 over December and $32,400,000 over January, 1949.

Exports totaled only $743,600,000, a drop of $199,300,000 from December and 360 million dollars from January, 1949.

As a result, the excess of exports —which measures how far foreign sales here fall short of covering foreign purchases in the United States—declined sharply.

This "trade gap" was only $120,900,000 in January, as compared with $337,800,000 in December and $513,900,000 in January, 1949.

The export figures include both commercial and Government-aid shipments. The bureau had no separate data on them. Figures on trade with individual countries will be available later.

In exports, the largest declines in January were in shipments of machinery and vehicles, textiles, foods and nonfood vegetable products, and nonmetalic minerals.

The important increase came largely from greater receipts of textiles. The next most important rise was in receipts of raw wool, sugar, pepper and tea. The only appreciable import decrease was in wood and paper.

Lewis Slugs Out 4th Victory Over Arch Rival, Phil Murray

By J. A. Livingston

DISCONNECTED thoughts on the coal settlement . . . What irony! Judge Keech held that John L. Lewis was a union leader who'd lost control of his union. The miners were out despite Lewis's order to them to return to work. Yet, at the same time, the coal operators were bargaining with this impotent leader for a contract to get the miners back to work. They knew if Lewis gave the right word, the miners would work.

Livingston

THE SETTLEMENT leaves a bad taste in everybody's mouth except Lewis'. Once again Lewis had the Nation groveling before him. President Truman ust squeaked through. Congress undoubtedly would have given Truman seizure powers. But the legislators would have taken time and debate. More schools and factories would have closed. More homes would have become cold. Accidents and misery would have accumulated. The President would have been blamed for delaying too long. As it is, well—he was saved.

WELLY K. HOPKINS, UMW attorney, was smart to refuse a jury trial. A jury would render a common-sense verdict, not a legalistic one. It would have wondered: How come 30,000 anthracite miners continued working under the same terms and conditions that the 372,000 bituminous miners rejected? Could that have been haphazard? Or must it have been by design—John L. Lewis' design?

Moreover, UMW locals held meetings and voted whether to obey Lewis' order. You'd think that the mere act of voting violated Judge Keech's order. After all, he ordered the union to work. The union as a union and the locals as locals had no right of decision. Technically, therefore, they couldn't vote on how to act.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN drew a hard-to-understand distinction between John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers and Benjamin Fairless and the United States Steel Corp. When the United States Steel Corp. and other steel companies refused a fact-finding board in the steel dispute, Truman sent out a telegram, saying: "Surely you are not afraid to have your side of this dispute examined in the public interest." Philip Murray's United Steelworkers had already agreed to a fact-finding board outside the Taft-Hartley Act.

When Truman proposed a fact-finding board in coal, the owners agreed, but Lewis declared that the "mine workers do not wish three strangers, however well-intentioned but necessarily ill-informed, to fix their wages, decree their working conditions, define their living standards and limit the educational opportunities of their children." Truman did not pursue the point. He appointed a Taft-Hartley fact-finding board.

LEWIS PROVED it's easier to put pressure on employers than on workers. The employers always have to worry about their properties. They fear that if the Government seizes, a rate of return will be fixed which might be confiscatory and establish a precedent. Further, they fear it may ultimately set the stage for Government ownership.

The mine workers, on the other hand, shrugged off the injunction. Any attempts to work in the UMW-dominated coal areas were stopped by goon squads, rifles, and overturned trucks. Lewis proved also the powerlessness of Government injunctions so long as workers respond to the "wink, the nod, and the code."

AGAIN LEWIS beat his old rival, Murray. In the recent steel settlement, Murray got something like 10 cents an hour on pensions. Lewis got a 70-cent-a-day wage boost, or 8¾ cents an hour. Also he got 10 cents a ton more for his pension fund. Since the average daily coal output per miner is 6.3 tons per day, the daily royalty would come to 63 cents a day, or 7⅛ cents per hour. Total, 16⅝ cents.

The following table shows the general postwar pattern of wage-and-pension gains and what Lewis got:

	Pattern	Lewis
First round	18½c	22½c
Second round	15	35
Third round	11-13	20½
Fourth round	10	16⅝
Total	54½c to 56½c	94⅝c

Moral: The squeaky wheel gets the most grease.

LEWIS' VICTORIES were not without a price. More and more home owners and industrial concerns are avoiding coal. New houses going up almost invariably call for oil- or gas-burning furnaces. Lewis has certainly accelerated the technological displacement of coal. Even on the railroads. The coal supply, despite its below-ground immensity, is undependable.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 7 (AP).—Wheat bounded around considerably at the Board of Trade today, influenced largely by stormy weather.

At the start, reports of dust storms in the winter wheat country brought on buying. Later reports of snow caused selling, but a sharp closing rally brought new seasonal highs marks.

Soybeans were inclined to bounce with wheat, while corn and oats followed a narrow price range in a steady manner.

At the close wheat was ⅝ to 2¼ higher; corn was ½ to 1 cent higher; oats were ⅛ higher to ⅜ lower; rye was ½ to ¾ higher; soybeans were ¾ higher to ¾ lower, and lard was unchanged to 7 cents a hundredweight higher.

When Cadillac says New... ...it's News!

When Cadillac announces that basic changes have been made in its design, it means the Standard of the World has once again been raised.

And that, of course, is news of the first magnitude.

This year, the number of Cadillac changes is far, far greater than is normally announced.

There is, of course, glamorous new beauty. All the bodies have been completely restyled and redesigned and are simply gorgeous in their line and contour.

The great new Cadillac high-compression engine has undergone a host of refinements which enhance every phase of its performance.

It is smoother; it is quieter; it is more powerful. And it carries you even farther on a gallon of gasoline.

Road balance and handling ease are remarkably improved. Steering is easier; braking is softer; and the car's stability on turns and curves is phenomenal. Almost all the effort has been taken out of driving.

And we feel like saying that the car is longer-lived, for new endurance has been built into certain of its parts. But the full life-span of a Cadillac has never yet been measured—so longer life would be impossible to prove!

Yes—this is a Cadillac "vintage" year—when its engineering and designing and manufacturing have all produced at their superlative best.

Better come in—and come up to Cadillac.

One on the Aisle—

Delightful Spoof Of Isle Politics

By Richard L. Coe

THE LITTLE has a delightful spoof of things political, British style, in "The Amazing Mr. Beecham."

This refreshing surprise is played with impeccable polish, notably shined by A. E. Matthews, who appeared earlier this season in the stage version known in this country as "Yes, M'Lord." As a play it was a big London hit called "The Chiltern Hundreds." William Douglas Home, a remarkable young man born to the purple, who also wrote "Now Barabbas," is writing about people he's observed closely. While laughter is the keynote, he also makes some good observations on people.

The story concerns an earl's son who, in order to get a trip to England from occupation duty in Europe to be with his American fiancee, takes advantage of an army order allowing leave to men running for Parliament. The lad says he'll run.

As a Conservative candidate, he is, to his surprise, taken seriously, but the race he runs is inept, half-hearted, to the shock of his Yank gal. His father, as county leftenant, prefers to shoot rabbits around his estate, a delightful oldster who hasn't a shred of snobbery and sees things the way they are, though they do come up looking odd.

A by-election is brought about by the elevation of his Labor victor to the peerage. The latter takes a liking to his ineffectual former opponent and puts him up as the Labor candidate. His election and the satisfaction of his Yank gal seem assured.

Until she prods the castle's doggedly respectable butler to oppose his master on the Conservative ticket. From here on the plot evolves on the fondness of the have-nots to enjoy what they finally have and the responsibility that's taken for granted by those born to position. This is handled with rich humor, a scullery maid becomes more patrician than the countess, the Labor leader succumbs to the dignity of the peerage.

You Can't Resign

Matthews is a sheer joy as the rabbit-shooting old earl, creating a richly amusing character. Cecil Parker, who was so good as the colonel in "Quartet," plays the Conservative butler and David Tomlinson does nicely as the baffled young man. There's a tasty dish named Lana Morris as the working girl raised to temporary rank, and all the others do neatly with their dry, astute roles.

Oh, yes. In case you get baffled near the end about "The Chiltern Hundreds" business, the acceptance of stewardship of this district by a member of Parliament who wishes to resign his seat effects his release. A member of Parliament can't legally resign.

That's the only technicality, politically speaking, likely to baffle you in "The Amazing Mr. Beecham." It's a natty, funny comedy.

"THE AMAZING MR. BEECHAM." J. Arthur Rank production produced by George H. Brown. Screen play by William Douglas Home and Patrick Kirwan from Home's stage play. Music by Benjamin Frankel. Photographed by Jack Hildyard. Directed by John Paddy Carstairs. At the Little.

MATINEE TODAY! It's been a long time since that phrase has crept into the Washington theater world . . . It's just a reminder that Susan Peters will be playing both this afternoon and tonight at the Gayety in "The Barrets of Wimpole Street," 2:30 and 8:30.

FILMS FROM Israeli, new to Washington, will be shown tonight in Cafritz Auditorium, 16th and Q sts. nw., at 8:30 . . . On the program will be "The Voyage of the Unafraid," "48 Hours" and "Dances of Israel."

SPAIN is the theme of another geographical movie trip, tonight at 8 in George Washington High auditorium, Alexandria . . . "Castles and Fiestas in Spain" titles this color film, with spoken commentary by Clement E. Conger . . . This former major's color film about post-war Britain was a success, and he's followed it up with these pictures sponsored by the National Geographic Society, which showed them in its Constitution Hall series . . . Politics is out; the accent is on the colorful items suggested by the title.

DEFINITELY set on the Gayety's "coming soon" books is "A Streetcar Named Desire," with Judith Evelyn heading the cast . . . The play will open a three-week stay Monday, April 3.

GEORGETOWN University's Mask and Bauble Club will celebrate its 96th anniversary next week with Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!" . . . Catholic U.'s Father Gilbert V. Hartke has arranged the play, which will be directed by George Perry, with Jack Reynolds in the leading role . . . The performances will be in Holy Trinity Auditorium the 15th, 16th and 18th.

"WOT, AGAIN?" A. E. Matthews watches Cecil Parker buss Lana Morris, who is, Matthews thinks, engaged to his own son, not to his politically minded butler in "The Amazing Mr. Beecham." This light-hearted comedy is at the Little

Dairy Anti-Trust Case Set To Go to Trial Here May 1

The Government's antitrust criminal case against several dairy groups here yesterday moved a step closer to trial in District Court, even though the parties couldn't agree on the general definition of the word "milk."

The case against the Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Association, Inc.; B. B. Derrick, its secretary-treasurer, and seven milk firms in this area, is now set for May 1, with trial expected to last two to three weeks.

Before Judge Alexander Holtzoff the Government and defense agreed on a number of technicalities, including presentation of documents, and other matters.

But when it came to the word "milk," nobody would agree as to its exact meaning. Finally, after about five minutes of argument, Judge Holtzhoff said that an overall definition was unnecessary at this time.

For purposes of the trial, the parties are bound to the definition of "fluid milk" as given in the indictment. It is:

"As used herein the term 'fluid milk' means cows' milk sold by distributors for consumption in fluid form as whole milk, and in milk drinks and buttermilk, and as skim milk sold for human consumption as skim milk."

Robert H. Winn, special assistant to the Attorney general, estimated that yesterday's preliminary hearing shortened the trial by as much as two weeks.

DP Talk Scheduled

Edward M. O'Connor, member of the Federal Commission of Displaced Persons, will discuss DPs in the United States before the student body of Catholic University Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. in McMahon Auditorium.

New Tuberculosis Blood Test Said to Show Faster Results

New York, March 7 (AP).—A new, cheap blood test tells quickly whether you have active tuberculosis, and even indicates how serious it is.

The test, an important advance in fighting the disease, was described tonight to the annual conference of the New York Tuberculosis and Health Association by Dr. Sidney Rothbard, chief of the division of pulmonary diseases of Montefiore Hospital here.

It tells whether tuberculosis germs are active in the body, and is specific or accurate on about 92 percent of cases, he said.

A big thing is that the test doesn't give any reaction if you have once had this disease and recovered.

The tuberculin skin test shows whether TB germs have once been present, or are active now. But it gives the same reaction even when the germs are no longer active and dangerous.

A positive reaction in a skin test thus means more searching, to try to recover TB germs from the body and show if a person is sick. This may take two or three weeks time.

The blood test can be done overnight, Dr. Rothbard said. It uses just a small amount of blood serum, the fluid part of blood. This sample is divided and diluted in a series of test tubes. Red blood cells from sheep, sensitized with an old type tuberculin, are added to the blood serum, and the mixtures are heated.

If the red cells clump together, it means TB germs are active in the human body.

It has been tested on 1200 persons with TB, other chest diseases and normal people, Dr. Rothbard said.

Symphony Drive Report Ready

The first post-drive report of the National Symphony's campaign for a $190,000 sustaining fund will be made today at a 12:30 luncheon in Barker Hall, YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

The drive was scheduled to close February 10, when 61 percent of the goal, or $116,483 had been raised, but campaign chairman Samuel Spencer extended the drive indefinitely at that time.

The National Symphony will give its final Wednesday concert tonight under the guest direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos in Constitution Hall.

This Is 'Win . . or Else' Year for McCarthy's Bosox

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., MARCH 7.—When the ball players on the eight National League clubs elected Marty Marion as their voice in owner-player relations, they duly recognized his business sense. Chairman Marion of the players' committee is now speaking out against the bonus business.

The ace shortstop of the Cardinals latched onto the $100,000 bonus payment by the Pittsburgh Pirates to Paul Pettit, California schoolboy, to make a ringing demand that the whole bonus procedure be outlawed.

POVICH

"I venture to say that when the Pirates paid the boy $100,000 each member of the Pittsburgh club lost about $4000 in salaries," declared Marion. The untried Pettit was taking dough out of the mouths of the Pittsburgh players who already had made good and would suffer in the payroll department, according to Marion.

"Please understand me," said Marion. "I'm for the up-and-coming young fellow getting all he can out of baseball, but when he deprives those who have already made their mark in the game of making money, it's high time to take steps to stop it."

ACCORDINGLY, Marion will go before the major leagues' executive council to press his case. He will try to enlist the concerted action of Fred Hutchinson, chairman of the American League players' committee. The very suggestion that veteran ball players are taking the rap in the payroll department is expected to produce Hutchinson's complete agreement with Marion.

Marion will weigh in with arguments other than the financial rap the established players may be taking in the hefty payments to "bonus babies," which make payrolls so top heavy other players suffer. He'll point out that the $10,000-a-year man who has made good doesn't relish being in the same dugout with a kid who got $100,000 before he ever made an appearance in a major league game.

"I have no doubt that bonus payments caused that dissension on the Braves last year," said Marion. He might well have been referring to Pitcher Johnny Antonelli, who was given $75,000 for signing and pitched only seven innings in 1948.

THERE WAS an uproar in New York this winter when Ted Williams was voted the most valuable player in the American League. Manhattan baseball writers yelped that either Phil Rizzuto or Joe Page more richly deserved the honor, and in a separate ballot voted Rizzuto as their player of the year.

Well, then, a nod is due also in the direction of the Nats' Sam Dente, who if he wasn't the finest shortstop in the league was at least most underrated. Dente came to Washington last winter from the Browns in a deal that was labeled unimportant. The fact that he couldn't beat out Eddie Pellagrini for the Browns' shortstop job stamped him as quite unexciting.

But Rizzuto outhit Dente by only six points last season. And he drove in only a half dozen more runs, despite the fact he was with a Yankee club that had oodles more men on bases. Dente made only five more errors than Rizzuto, but he handled 811 chances, second in the league only to the A's Eddie Joost. And he figured in only two fewer double plays. Pretty soon somebody ought to get around to liking Dente.

IF THERE'S a coolness between Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats and Outfielder Eddie Stewart, no wonder. Before the spring training opened, Harris publicly visioned a Washington outfield comprised of Irv Noren, Sam Mele and Gil Coan.

That was in Stewart's craw 3000 miles away in California, and was a factor in his reluctance to sign a 1950 contract. He said frankly he didn't relish Harris' preseason statements that gave him no place in the regular lineup after topping the club's outfielders with his .284 batting average last season.

Apprised of Stewart's grumbling, Harris was completely unperturbed. "Humph," he said. "All Stewart has to do is show me he's a better ball player than any of the other three, and we'll be great friends."

Jack 'Flattens' Keydet

320-Pounder Wins Mat Title for W&L

Jerry Jack, 320-pounder, literally flattened VMI's Jerry Eggleston to give Washington and Lee its third consecutive Southern Conference wrestling championship last night at College Park.

Jack pinned his 180-pound Keydet opponent in 3.38, scoring his third fall of the tournament.

VMI had a fighting chance for a tie before the last match—all Eggleston had to do was to pin the mammoth Jack. He fell short by 140 pounds.

Nats Relax, Cuban Star Arrives to Pitch to A's

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporters

Orlando, Fla., March 7.—The plane from Cuba deposited Senor Conrado Marrero in the Nats' midst tonight and Manager Bucky Harris announced he would have a quick look at the newest addition to his pitching staff.

Harris declared Marrero, with the fascinating 25-8 record for the Washington-owned Havana club last season, will be the first Washington pitcher unveiled when the Nats play their first exhibition game, on Saturday, against the Athletics at West Palm Beach.

Harris' eagerness to send Marrero into action doesn't all stem from curiosity. "None of our other pitchers are really ready and Marrero has been pitching in Cuba all winter and ought to be in shape," he pointed out.

So Guerra Can Interpret

He's going to let Marrero go five, maybe six innings, against the A's, more than the normal stint at this stage of the season.

Palm Beach has been selected as the spot for Marrero's unveiling for another reason, Harris pointed out. "I can't talk Spanish, and there are no other Cubans on the squad," he said. "I'll get Mickey Guerra of the A's to be the go-between for Marreo and I."

Marrero is a chunky righthander who topped the Florida-International League in pitching in 1949. He's only five-seven and weighs a mere 159. But Harris knows about his good fast ball, his smart curve and wonderful control habits.

"I had the Yankees over in Cuba in 1947, and a little Cuban pitcher beat us, 2-1. I'm delighted to remember that it was this same Marrero," said Harris.

Pearce a Curiosity

For the Saturday and Sunday games at West Palm Beach, Harris will also give a pair of his veterans, Sid Hudson and Joe Haynes a short chore on the mound. And he'll get his first look at a couple of his rookie hurlers—Dick Welk and Jim Pearce.

There's an exciting curiosity about Pearce, a 6-foot-6 righthander of easy delivery in the Nats' camp. Harris likes the action of the tall fellow, and is praying that he can develop the control he needs.

Orlando's all-night rains made a bog of Tinker Field and Harris postponed today's workout until the afternoon, to give the sun a chance to dry up the premises. It did, and the hitters had high carnival batting the ball out of the lot with the help of the new shortened fences.

One of the most pleasing items in the Nats' camp is the apparent recovery of Joe Haynes from the shoulder operation that bothered him all last season . . . Haynes was buzzing the ball today with no sign of discomfort and barring re-injury could take up a lot of slack in the pitching staff . . . Clyde Vollmer drove three balls in succession over the left field wall to take down the hitting honors for the day . . . Eddie Stewart got in his first batting session and showed his rustiness after his flight from California . . . Harris today declared that the second base job on his club is wide open, with Al Kozar, Sherry Robertson and Rookie George Genovese the candidates . . . this year the Nats will have color —the somber gray and blue has been discarded in favor of red, white and blue-striped sox, with Red "Ws" on their caps and shirts.

Chisari Resigns As C. U. Trainer

Tom Chisari, Catholic University trainer, will resign in June. Chisari started in at C. U. as an assistant football coach in 1947 and served as head coach in 1948.

He attended St. John's High School and Maryland University starring in both football and basketball. Chisari hopes to get a job as a high school coach.

Frankie Albert Helps

Navy's Coaches Will Hop In, Show Players What to Do

Annapolis, Md., March 7(AP).—Navy's new football coaching staff can rewrite the old advice: "Do as I say and not as I do."

"The men surrounding me are young, energetic, hard workers," says Head Coach Eddie Erdelatz. "They will get in and show our boys what to do and how to do it."

Doing it will be three professional players, Len Eshmont, Don Clark and Frankie Albert. All played last year with the San Francisco 49ers of which Erdelatz was an assistant coach.

Albert, one of the slickest articles in pro ball, will go on playing with the 49ers. But the Navy announced today he had agreed to come here for two weeks of spring practice to pass on his ball-handling wizardry to the Middie quarterbacks.

Spring practice will start next Tuesday when the new coaches will meet the squad for the first time.

Albert's job as outlined by Erdelatz will be to teach the signal callers "how to spin, how to throw the ball and, most important, when to throw it."

Along this line, Coach Erdelatz disclosed his T-formation quarterback will have to be more than just a passer. He'll be expected to run with the ball, too.

However, before worrying about his system Erdelatz will see that Navy learns fundamentals. "This game is blocking and tackling and we'll start with that," he said.

Princeton Routs Hoyas In Finale

Special to The Washington Post

Princeton, N. J., March 7.—Georgetown's basketball season ran 20 minutes too long.

Princeton's Ivy League champions romped to a 63-49 victory after the Hoyas held a one-point halftime lead here tonight.

The loss was the 12th for Georgetown and, coupled with a loss to Villanova Monday night, gave it a .500 record for the year.

Tommy O'Keefe, high-scoring Hoya forward, closed out his collegiate career with an 18-point performance, tying Princeton's Bernie Adams for honors.

George Sella, brilliant basketball and football performer for the Tigers, was runnerup with 16.

Princeton got off to a 14-5 lead but, led by O'Keefe, Georgetown gained a 28-27 edge at intermission. Stella started Princeton's second-half surge with a push shot and the home team never lost the lead, scoring at will in the closing stages.

The Sawyer Story

Professor Makes Hit With Psychology

Editor's Note: The author of these articles has covered baseball in Philadelphia for many years as newspaper writer and radio commentator.

By Harry Robert

WHEN EDWIN MELBY SAWYER, manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, was a professor at Ithaca College from 1937 through 1943, his courses did not include psychology.

There is no doubt, though, that he learned a lot about the mental processes of young men. This special knowledge has been useful to him in handling the youngest team in the major leagues.

SAWYER

One of the surprises of the Phillies last season was the transformation of Andy Seminick from a catcher who, in early spring, looked like a candidate for the scrap heap. He became a brilliant receiver and long-ball clutch hitter. Andy was elected catcher for the National League in the All-Star game. Just the sight of Seminick coming out of the dugout in 1948 was the signal for an angry crescendo of boos from the Shibe Park wolves.

When a Phillies play went wrong, Andy Seminick seemed to be in the middle of it. Many a time he did his part perfectly, but there would be a mix-up on the other end. Andy looked bad—he was unjustly blamed for many a "skull." But in 1949 he was a different ball player and a great favorite with Phillies rooters.

Eddie Miller, veteran infielder who covered second for the Phils the first half of the season, deserves the credit for Seminick's rejuvenation, according to Professor Sawyer.

"A great deal can be accomplished on a ball club by associations and we pay a lot of attention to that," Sawyer explained. "Roommates are very important. I put Miller in with Seminick on our road trips. Eddie made a different man of Andy.

"Besides his baseball knowledge, Miller has a keen sense of humor. He keeps the whole club cheerful, even on our bad days. His effect on Andy has been a kind of baseball miracle. Andy was inclined to be something of an introvert. Miller brought him out of it and perked him up."

LAURENCE S. HILL, now dean of the School of Health and Physical Education at Ithaca, is the man who interested Sawyer in college teaching. He recalls that Professor Sawyer had a sense of humor as a teacher, that students were rarely able to put anything over on him.

Sawyer was noted for his uncanny memory of the foibles of individual students, which prevented them from getting away with the usual excuses. For this reason, they respected him highly.

Phillies' players don't get away with much, either!

The rookie third baseman, Willie (Puddin' Head) Jones, got a sprained thumb in a midseason exhibition game. Sometimes, if a player is looking for it, he can get a week's rest with that sort of injury.

Jones was out of the lineup one day, but his thumb still was swollen and painful.

"I don't know how I can play tomorrow," he told Sawyer.

Sawyer was adjusting his tie before a mirror.

"You don't have to play if you don't feel like it," he said.

"Yes, but who's going to play third?" Jones wondered.

"Oh, don't let that worry you," replied Sawyer. "We've got

Stubborn Seminick Heads Home

Yanks Sign Raschi, Berra; 5 Others Thin Holdout Ranks

New York, March 7 (AP).—Major league baseball's holdout ranks thinned today as seven players came to terms.

Players inking their contracts were Catcher Yogi Berra and Pitcher Vic Raschi of the New York Yankees, Pitchers Ken Heintzelman and Robin Roberts of the Philadelphia Phillies, First Baseman Jack Graham of the St. Louis Browns and Infielder Kermit Wahl of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Pitcher Howie Pollet and the St. Louis Cards settled their dispute tonight, Pollet, last Redbird to sign, reportedly will receive $26,000, including attendance bonuses.

Name players still outside the fold are Shortstop Vern Stephens of the Boston Red Sox, Catcher Andy Seminick of the Phils and Pitcher Tommy Byrne and Infielder Bobby Brown of the Yanks.

Berra came to terms at St. Petersburg, Fla., early in the day, signing for an estimated $20,000.

Raschi fell into line later. The big righthander was asking for a 100 percent increase from $18,000 to $36,000. Final terms were not announced but observers placed Raschi in the $30,000 bracket.

W.&M. Wallops Virginia, 76 to 58

Norfolk, Va., March 7 (AP).—Tall Chet Giermak closed out his college basketball career with 29 points here tonight as William and Mary surged in the last half for a 76-58 rout of Virginia.

Virginia made it a battle only for the first half, leading at one stage, 25-24. But the Indians went in front, 35-27 by halftime and thereafter ran away with the ball game. Center Joe Noertker bucketed 19 points to pace Virginia.

Lavelli Leads Celtics' 75-64 Rout of Caps

Providence, R. I., March 7.—Washington's Caps, showing recent signs of improvement, lapsed back into losing form here tonight against the Boston Celtics, 75-64.

The Celtics, who were beaten in Washington Saturday night by 20 points, held as much as a 23-point margin in the second half after being tied 32-all at halftime.

Tony Lavelli, squeeze box artist, squeezed in 19 points to lead both teams in scoring. Howie shannon was runnerup with 17.

Leo Katkaveck was the unusual high man for the Caps with 14 points. Dick O'Keefe and Chuck Gilmur each had 10. Long Don Otten, 7-foot center, was held to 8 points, his lowest total since he was traded to the Caps from Tri-City.

It was the third victory for the Celtics in five meetings with Washington and they wind up hostilities in Boston Friday night. Boston has won five of the six games it shifted to this former BAA town this season.

Joe Culmone Has 4 Winners At Gulfstream

New York, March 7 (AP).—Joe Culmone, a 19-year-old apprentice, stole the riding show today at Gulfstream Park by winning with four of his eight mounts. He now has seven victories in the three days of the meeting.

Each of Culmone's winners paid good odds. He started out by clicking astride Lands End ($12.70) in the second race and Brancy Punch ($26.40) in the fifth.

Joe then won the featured sixth on Blazing ($14.30) and completed his "home run" with Lictor ($10.10) in the eighth. Culmone also rode two seconds.

Players Sure They Won't Boot Chances Third Time

By Carl Lundquist

Sarasota, Fla., March 6 (U.P.).—This is the year for the Boston Red Sox—or else.

The club that got struck by lightning twice in the same place in the last game of the 1948 and '49 seasons just can't believe it will happen again.

And today, only 24 hours after the full contingent of players was due in camp, Manager Joe McCarthy can tell you his opening day lineup except for the pitcher.

"This year we're all set," said the venerable Irishman. "We haven't any need to experiment because, except for pitchers, we don't have any rookies to speak of. So I can put my regular club on the field, barring injuries, of course, and we will be in there trying for a fast get-away."

This Is Another Year

McCarthy, who lost those last two pennants at the finish of the race without the semblance of an alibi, said, "No, sir, we're not talking about that any more—this is another year."

And at the batting cage as big man Ted Williams, Johnny Pesky, Bobby Doerr, Al Zarilla, Birdie Tebbetts and the rest came in to take their licks, the same feeling was reflected.

"We have got to do it this year or throw in the sponge," said the peppery Pesky, who looked ready to start the season as he cavorted about his third base post. "And we have a chance to get off to a good start because we will be playing most early games at Fenway Park where we're usually at our best.

"Yeah, but don't forget we weren't too hot anywhere early last year," retorted Catcher Tebbetts. "We sure couldn't get off to a much worse start. It doesn't matter where you play the games if you don't win 'em."

Doerr, the lean, second base veteran, said, "the whole gang—every last one of us—feels we just can't let it happen again."

Williams, taking a cut at a fast pitch by Lefty Mel Pernell, hit one a mile and roared back—"put it there full steam, I've got to get my hitting eye back."

Barring injuries McCarthy's starting crew will consist of Williams, Dom DiMaggio, and Al Zarilla in the outfield, Billy Goodman at first, Doerr at second, Holdout Vern Stephens at short, Pesky at third and Tebbetts behind the plate.

Is there a better starting lineup anywhere in baseball? Not as far as McCarthy is concerned, and his players don't think so, either.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 7 (AP).—Heavy rains during the night and right up to noon soaked Miller Huggins Field so badly that the New York Yankees were forced to forego their training routine today. Favorite Nora T Folds In Stretch

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., March 7.—Highland Farm's High Hunch opened 1950 just as he closed 1949—with a victory at Charles Town.

The 5-year-old came through with a stretch punch that brought a half-length triumph over James Stuart's Ranger Mosby in the Shepherd Purse, featuring the Tuesday program.

Third money went to Mrs. J. S. Gentzler's Inez M, in the field of six.

With Nora T., owned by Mildred Scala, in the favorite role, High Hunch returned a $7 mutuel. Under the handling of Apprentice Jimmy McDermott, the son of Gilded Knight and Hunsie was clocked in 1:23 2/5 for the 6½ furlongs over a fast track and under cloudy skies from which snow flurries fell during the late stages of the program.

Favorites Prevail

High Hunch, winner of only one race in 1948, took two purses here last December. After being beaten in a photo at 53-1, he came back and won at 20-1 and 12-1.

Nora T. was one of the few choices to fail on the card. She went to the front early, set a good pace but folded when challenged by Ranger Mosby. The latter saved ground and appeared to have the situation well in hand.

However, McDermott put High Hunch to a drive and the chestnut thoroughbred gained gradually, getting abreast of Ranger Mosby in midstretch and then drew outright at the wire. Inez M. was six lengths off the place.

Love My Gal Wins

Five favorites won, the program opening and closing with a winning performance by an odds-on choice. W. F. Parks' Dawndale took the finale by 10 lengths to return a $4.20 mutuel.

J. E. Allison, jr.'s Love Gal scored in the first race at $3.20, getting home a neck in front of P. Cross' Wye River with R. E. Vogelman, jr.'s Snow Hill third.

Those who coupled Love My Gal with L. B. Bosley's Phara Watch collected $18.60 on the daily double combination of four and seven.

Phara Watch turned back L. P. Kilvington's Rickey Boy and H. L. Compton's Simms, among others and returned an individual mutuel of $12.

Trainer Dan Chamblin saddled his fifth winner in three days, the Virginian sending Mrs. George Fishback's Grandma C. out to whip her opposition in the seventh race. Jimmy Baird, leading rider at the meeting, was aboard the mare. H. J. Elliott's Corinth was second after setting most of the pace with the Pen-Mar stable's Hampshire Boy third. Grandma C returned $3.60.

Darnell Wrestles Here Tonight

Billy Darnell takes on Tony Morelli in the feature bout at Turner's Arena tonight. Darnell, who wrestles attired as a leopard, defeated Irish Jack Kelly last week.

A two-man team match pits Kenny Ackles and Ace Freeman against Jim Austeri and Tiny Mills in the best two of three falls. Other bouts have Dutch Schweigert against Harry Kruskamp and George Bruckman tangling with Pat O'Hara.

Connie Speaks Up: 'We Want That Flag'

By Red Smith

Smith

"His wife says," the man with the photograph said, "that he was fit to live with last night and this morning for the first time in years."

"I see you've got a hitting catcher," somebody remarked to Connie Mack.

"Can't make these rookies get in shape," Connie explained. "As a matter of fact, Mickey has lost 9 pounds in the days we've been here. But we don't need him. I like my ball club, anyway."

THEN HE SAID something that hadn't been said in a Philadelphia camp in almost twenty years.

"We're going for the championship. Oh, I realize we'll have four tough clubs against us—Boston, the Yankees, Cleveland and Detroit. They're strong, but I don't think any team is going to have an easy time. I think all five of us will be bunched."

"We have good pitching," Connie said. "Joe Coleman and Lou Brissie should be great pitchers. Last year Alex Kellner was our first twenty-game winner since Lefty Grove. If Phil Marchildon should come back it would be wonderful but even if he doesn't, our pitching will be strong. We don't need him."

Marchildon, swift and gifted before he went to war and wound up in German prison camps, was able to play scarcely at all last year. He'd been off his feed the summer before that, too, and it was believed he had some stomach disorder left over from prison camp days.

"But what kind of stuff could he have picked up that wouldn't bother him until a couple of years later?" Connie said. "He was himself after the war, you know. Won 19 for us in 1947. He did look fine yesterday, though, in his two innings. He was throwing hard and he wasn't fidgeting or fooling around with his arm the way he did last year. He just looked like a pitcher."

CONNIE SAID something else that suggested times had changed in this once leisurely camp.

"Our doctor," he said, "didn't want Phil to pitch yesterday. But Cochrane and I wanted him to, because we want to know about him."

Philadelphia's other distinguished invalid, Barney McCosky, who couldn't play at all last year, underwent a winter operation on his back.

"His doctor won't let him swing a bat until March 15," Connie said, "but he's running and fielding and throwing. He thinks he's all right. You know, he has a life-time batting average of 320. If he's all right, we'll be in good shape in the outfield with Barney and Sam Chapman and Elmer Valo.

"One place where we're strong, we've got much better reserves than we ever had. We have Bill Hitchcock for utility work in the infield and there's a fellow named Kermit Wahl coming from Montreal——

"I let him stay home a few days because his wife was having a baby—he played third base but he can play shortstop, too. He drives in a lot of runs. We gave a pitcher, Bill McCahan, and $25,000 for him."

THE ATHLETICS shelled out freely to St. Louis for Bob Dillinger, a third baseman who hits .324, and Paul Lehner, an outfielder, whom Connie wanted because he could play first base if Ferris Fain were damaged. They got Ed Klieman, for relief pitching, from the White Sox, sending Heinie Majeski to Chicago.

"That wasn't my deal," Connie said, and that's something he has said seldom in 50 years. "The directors made it. Majeski has been hit on the head at the plate several times. He's frozen up there, can't get away from a pitched ball. But he can hit. I'd have liked to keep him for utility."

"How about this rookie, Bob Wellman," he was asked, "the outfielder who hit one over the wall yesterday?"

"He uppercuts the ball," Connie said. "There'll be some doubt about him."

There's an outfield candidate named Ben Guintini, an acrobat in a family of acrobats, who once trained with Pittsburgh. He started teaching tumbling to playmates on the Pirates, and one day they broke three beds in a hotel. Guintini got his release that night. Last year he hit 32 home runs for Dallas.

"He sure can field," Connie said, "if he could only hit."

Duquesne, St. John's Draw Byes

By Murray Rose

New York, March 7 (AP).—The path was cleared today for a possible return meeting between Bradley and Kentucky as those two outstanding quintets were seeded one-two and placed in opposite brackets for the National Invitation Tourney in Madison Square Garden.

Duquesne of Pittsburgh was seeded third and St. John's of Brooklyn fourth for the 12-team tourney which gets under way Saturday with afternoon and night doubleheaders. Night doubleheaders will be played on the remaining dates, March 13, 14, 16 and 18.

The four seeded teams automatically moved into the quarter-final round and won't see any action until Monday or Tuesday. Western Kentucky and Niagara open the tourney at 2 p.m. (EST) Saturday.

Here's the schedule through the quarter-final round and the order in which the teams will play.

Saturday afternoon: 2 p. m. (EST)—Western Kentucky (24-5) vs. Niagara (20-6); 3:45 p. m.—San Francisco (19-6) vs. C. C. N. Y. (16-5).

Saturday night (first game, 8:15 p. m., second 10 p. m.)—La Salle (20-3) vs. Arizona (25-4); Long Island U. (20-4) vs. Syracuse (17-7).

Monday night—Bradley (27-3) vs. L. I. U.-Syracuse winner; St. John's (22-4) vs. Western Kentucky-Niagara winner.

Tuesday night—Duquesne (22-3) vs. La Salle-Arizona winner; Kentucky (23-4) vs. San Francisco-C. C. N. Y. winner.

The survivors of the Monday night contests will meet each other in one of Thursday's semifinals. The Tuesday night victors will clash in the other semifinal.

Thus a return clash between Bradley, the Nation's No. 1 team, and Kentucky, No. 3, could occur. In their only previous meeting this season, Kentucky whipped Bradley, 71-66, in the Sugar Bowl Tourney.

Baylor in NCAA Tourney

Meanwhile the NCAA filled five of its eight berths today for its postseason tourney with the selection of Baylor, cochampion of the Southwest Conference, to represent District six.

District three—North Carolina State selected.

District four — Ohio State selected.

District five—Bradley, Missouri Valley champion, to meet Big Seven champion (Kansas State, Kansas or Nebraska) in playoff at Kansas City, March 20.

District six—Baylor selected.

District seven—Brigham Young selected.

District eight—UCLA and Washington State, divisional champions of Pacific Coast Conference, meet in playoff.

Patton, W. Virginia Coach, Dies at 45

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., March 7 (AP).—Lee Patton, the small-town coach who turned out more winning basketball teams at West Virginia University than anybody before him, died unexpectedly today.

LEE PATTON

The 45-year-old Texan who coached all sports at Princeton (W. Va.) High School for 14 years before coming here in 1946, was the victim of complications resulting from auto accident injuries.

Patton was hurt St. Valentine's Day in a crash on the Pennsylvania Turnpike near Bedford, Pa. The driver of the other car was killed outright. Forrest Crane, director of athletic publicity at the university, is still hospitalized as a result of the accident.

Patton remained in a hospital at Bedford until February 27, suffering from a fractured shoulder, broken ribs and other injuries. While there, he suffered a blood clot on one lung and was under an oxygen tent for some time but apparently recovered.

The coach was brought to a hospital in Morgantown on February 27, and was taken to his home yesterday.

Doctors said he suffered a heart attack, apparently the result of another blood clot, about 3 a. m. today, and this was followed by another around 5:30. He died about 6 a. m.

Patton, whose teams had been playing without him for the last six engagements, was in the midst of his worst season since coming to the university in 1946.

The first team he turned out won 22 games while losing only 3 and finished third in the National Invitation Tournament at Madison Square Garden.

PATTON TEAMS from 1946 through 1949, won a grand total of 78 games against 15 defeats.

Patton is survived by his widow and two daughters, Ann Patton, a university sophomore, and Loralee Patton, a student of Morgantown high school.

Bradley Voted Best in Nation

New York, March 7. (AP)—The comeback stories of the 1949-50 College basketball season were written by Bradley and Ohio State.

The final Associated Press poll of the season today showed Bradley's Bounding Braves of Peoria, Ill., the concensus choice of 206 sports writers and broadcasters. The Buckeyes are second.

That's quite a jump from the positions these teams held in the final balloting a year ago. Bradley struggled in seventh while Ohio State was buried in twentieth position.

D. C. Area VA Layoff Smaller Than Expected; Notices Go Out Friday

The layoff of VA employes here will be smaller than was first expected, but it will be sizable nevertheless over the next six months. Thirty-day notices to 7800 VA workers the Nation over will be handed out Friday.

These are among the highlights of VA's complicated personnel problems in this city:

1. About 600 war service and temporary Grade 2 and 3 clerks here will be fired in the next 90 days. This layoff was ordered by Civil Service, but it has a direct effect on the 7800-man reduction. VA had planned to fill most of these jobs from those who passed the recent Civil Service clerical test, but now several hundred of them will be abolished to prevent regular employes from being fired in Friday's shakedown.

. The 2000-man temporary staff working on the GI insurance dividends will be retained longer than was expected. About 800 already have been laid off and the next big reduction is now tentatively set for the end of May.

3. Among the layoff notices to go out Friday, its reported, will be about 100 in the VA regional office here; 55 in special services; 90 in the department of medicine and surgery; and about 50 each in insurance and claims, and a scattering of others throughout headquarters.

LOYALTY: The Army has agreed to come in under the President's Federal employe loyalty program if special legislation is passed by Congress to summarily fire employes it considers to be a security risk.

John Connell, speaking for the Army, revealed the policy shift in indorsing the security bill yesterday at a House Civil Service Committee hearing. The Army now uses a wartime law to check up on the loyalty of its employes.

Besides Connell, officials from half a dozen "sensitive" agencies approved the Administration's security bill, which was introduced by Chairman Murray (D., Tenn.). They explained that the measure was an attempt to draw a line between "security" and loyalty firings. An employe, it was pointed out, could be completely loyal but if he got drunk and talked too much about his secret work he would be a bad security risk.

The bill would give summary suspension on security grounds to these agency heads: State, Defense, Army, Navy, Air Force, Treasury, Atomic Energy, National Security Resources Board and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

A permanent employe who is fired on security charges could be placed by Civil Service in a routine job in another agency.

LONGEVITY: The Senate Postoffice Civil Service Committee yesterday amended a House-approved bill to extend longevity benefits to custodial, special delivery messengers, and other types of postal employes. The House bill covered rural carriers. The object of the Senate bill is to give credit for all past postal service to all postal employes toward longevity raises.

CIVIL SERVICE will give its postponed Census clerk and tabulating machine operator test to 10,000 applicants here on March 18. Employes who are promoted or transferred to a higher grade will get at least a one-step pay boost under new Civil Service regulations issued yesterday.

U. S. Hurting Washington, Federation Dinner Told

Sasscer Charges Shrinking Federal Payments Hamper Meeting Budget

A decreasing Federal payment in the face of expansion of Government facilities is hampering Washington's ability to meet its budget, Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), declared last night.

More than 500 approving guests at the fortieth anniversary banquet of the Federation of Citizens Associations heard Sasscer urge a Federal payment "commensurate with the cost of running the Government."

"The money Washington receives from the Federal Government is not a contribution but a payment in lieu of taxes and a payment for services rendered to the Federal Government," Sasscer declared.

Land Off Tax Rolls

With the Federal Government taking an increasing amount of land off the tax rolls, the speaker said," we have Washington, the community, becoming more and more handicapped in its ability to meet its budget, while the contribution is getting smaller and smaller."

Sasscer went on to explain his area commission bill which would set up a body to study and recommend plans for overall area improvement.

Greater Washington, which Sasscer described as potentially the greatest city in the country, is one area with similar problems and with many approaches that cannot be unscrambled one from the other, the Prince Georges County Congressman said.

How Bill Would Help

His bill could be helpful in zoning, public utility and other problems, he said, but the commission would only recommend. Sasscer emphasized that the bill would in no way infringe on the sovereignty of the component areas.

Federation President Herbert P. Leeman said the organization's principal objective is home rule for Washington.

"That is the keystone of our civic efforts," Leeman said of the federation which, he insisted, works "for the interest of the majority of the people of Washington . . . because they have no other voice."

Mrs. Henry A. Bartlett, delegate from the Burroughs Citizens Association, received the Star Cup for outstanding civic contributions last year.

Among the guests were District Judge Richmond B. Keech, Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West and Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew.

Art Brown of radio station WWDC headed the entertainers who included Miss Lois Agee, vocalist, the Metropolitan Police Band and the Silver Shield Quartet.

Joseph A. Kaufman, president of Forest Hills Citizens Association, was chairman of the dinner committee.

TV Repair Man Falls 35 Ft. When Ladder Slips

A television repair man fell 35 feet to the ground yesterday when an extension ladder slipped from under him but he escaped with minor injuries.

Treated at Casualty Hospital, he was identified as Harold Robert Faucon, 29, of 8261 Lancaster dr., Bethesda, Md. He is employed by the Atlantic Radio and Television Service.

Mrs. David Pope, 2000 Upshur st. ne., whose television antenna he was repairing at about 6 p. m., said he lost his balance when trying to lower the antenna. The ladder fell away from him and he slid and fell to the ground.

She said she heard him crying for help and ran out of the house to find him walking around in a dazed condition. She called the Fire Department Rescue Squad No. 2 to take him to the hospital.

After 25 Years

Mary Norton To Leave Congress

REP. MARY NORTON
She will retire

Mrs. Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.), dean of women in Congress, announced last night she will retire from Congress at the end of this session.

"Battling Mary," as she is sometimes known at the Capitol, disclosed her retirement plans from her sick bed at Bethesda Naval Hospital, where she is recovering from a flu attack.

She reached her seventy-fifth birthday yesterday. She is serving her twenty-fifth consecutive year in Congress.

The handsome dean of congressional women said her decision to retire was a "very difficult" one.

Mrs. Norton's illness made it necessary to cancel a birthday party at the Capitol yesterday, planned by Mrs. India Edwards, head of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee. Some 50 Democratic women and representatives from New Jersey and other States had been invited.

She was taken to the Naval Hospital last Saturday after a cold got worse. She was reported doing nicely last night.

"I shall always be sincerely grateful to my good friend, the honorable Frank Hague, the Democratic organization and all of my constitutents," Mrs. Norton said last night, "for the support and faith they have expressed over many years by the great majorities they have given me at every election."

For 10 years, from 1937 to 1947, Mrs. Norton headed the House Labor Committee—becoming the first woman to chairman a major committee.

Highlight of her legislative accomplishments is her vigorous fight for the Wage and Hour Law. It was during that and other hot floor debates that her male colleagues learned she could take care of herself in any legislative tangle.

As a woman, she has always fought for sufficient funds for the Children's Bureau. During the war, she sponsored an amendment to the Lanham Act which provided funds for care of children whose mothers worked in war factories.

Mrs. Norton was an unofficial "mayor" of Washington for seven years. She was Chairman of the House District Committee from 1930 to 1937. Throughout her tenure on the local committee she urged that the Commissioners be given more power to administer municipal affairs.

She was a perennial sponsor of legislation to grant District residents national representation in Congress.

Masonic Official Inspects Conferral of 6th Degree

Frank C. Patton of Omaha, Nebr., lieutenant grand commander of the Supreme Council of Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Free Masonry, last night inspected the conferral of the sixth degree to a class of 96 candidates at the Scottish Rite Temple, 2800 16th st. nw.

The degree work was conferred under the direction of Dr. John C. Palmer and Evan Jones. Patton was accompanied by Col. William E. Schooley, deputy of Washington, and Charles F. Kleinknecht of Washington, acting grand secretary general of the Supreme Council.

Bridge Site Argument Rekindled

House Subcommittee Referees Tussle Between Officials Over Anacostia Span

A House District Subcommittee yesterday referred a snappy, yet inconclusive, slugfest between the Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission over a site for the proposed Anacostia Bridge.

Unusued ammunition was piled so high after this first 2½-hour "Hill" session that acting Subcommittee Chairman Arthur G. Klein scheduled another hearing for 10 a. m. Thursday.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young carried the cudgel for the E. Capitol st. bridge site and drew strong support from two nearby Maryland Congressmen—Representtives Sasscer (D) and Beall (R.).

The Commissioner also won new and unexpected backing from Russell H. McCain of the Maryland State Roads Commission, who testified the E. Capitol st. location would "fit better" with his State's road program.

Dean William W. Wurster, NCPPC chairman, stubbornly fought against the E. Capitol site, calling for "further study of the over-all trans-Anacostia bridge problem."

Nolen to Testify

NCPPC Planning Director John Nolen has held out for fixing the site in line with Massachusetts avenue. He will testify Thursday.

The bulk of the testimony was essentially a repeat performance of a public hearing before the NCPPC in January when the planning group voted to delay its location decision for "further study of the over-all Anacostia Bridge situation" and until bottlenecks are broken at the existing bridges.

Young sought to torpedo the fix-up-present-bridges-first argument, stating necessary underpasses and overpasses at Benning and Sousa bridges would cost about 9½ million dollars, slightly less than the estimated cost of a new span at E. Capitol st.

Without mentioning the Massachusetts ave. site, Wurster also argued he was fearful the Commissioners' proposal might lead to roadways through the Arboretum and "destroy the magnificent recreation area, including Kingman Lake," at the foot of E. Capitol st.

Should Connect, He Says

The planning official also urged that any new crossing should serve to connect with the new Baltimore-Washington Parkway.

Young said he would answer the expressed fears of infringing upon the E. Capitol street recreation area on Thursday.

The downtown interagency deadlock was dumped in the lap of Congress by Representatives Sasscer and Beall after the House subcommittee on District Appropriations recently defied a two-million-dollar item for a start on the Anacostia span, pending agreement on where the bridge should be built.

The committee is considering a Sasscer-Beall bill which fixes the new bridge location at E. Capitol st. and authorizes an expenditure of up to 12 million dollars.

Blick, Squad Break Up Place Acting on Tip

'Reasonable Grounds' Basis for Destroying Tables and Chairs

Vice Squad Lieut. Roy E. Blick and five of his men yesterday morning destroyed two long tables and eight or nine chairs behind a partition in a store at 623 Pennsylvania ave. se.

Blick described the tables as paraphernalia for a horseroom. He said he acted as the result of a tip he received two to three weeks ago that a betting parlor was to be established at the address.

Only one telephone, in a pay booth, was set up behind the partition. In the front of the store, Blick said, were small quantities of fruit, magazines, papers, and a soft drink machine.

Two men were in the store front, but Blick said no charges were preferred against them.

The vice squad lieutenant said he staged the "raid" without a warrant, acting on "reasonable grounds."

"We can seize gambling equipment anywhere we find it," he said.

One of the men later had the broken up furniture carted away as firewood.

Pay Rival Lawyer, Court Tells Keleher

John B. (Dapper Jack) Keleher was ordered yesterday to pay $2500 to his divorced wife's lawyer, James J. Laughlin, for his legal services in the recent divorce trial.

From the most recent court proceedings, it appeared that the divorce cases of Keleher, a "retired" gambler, and Mrs. Anna T. (Dolly) Keleher are far from over.

Laughlin announced that he is going to appeal Judge Charles F. McLaughlin's decision giving Keleher a divorce and a $60,000 lump sum payment to Mrs. Keleher in lieu of periodic alimony.

At the same time, Attorney Alvin L. Newmyer, who represents Keleher, said he doubted whether the $60,000 decree is binding against his client, anyway. Newmyer said he didn't think local statutes allowed lump sum payments in such a case.

The lawyers are due to come back to Judge McLaughlin Friday to try to settle the terms of the decree.

Laughlin originally put the value of his legal services at $12,500, but the judge lopped off $10,000 when Newmyer said the sum was excessive.

In the suits, Keleher asked for and got an absolute divorce on ground of constructive desertion. Mrs. Keleher lost her suit for a limited divorce on the ground that Keleher was cruel.

Still to be heard is an alienation of affections suit Mrs. Keleher filed against "the other woman," Mrs. Dorothy S. Blake. Also Mrs. Keleher has sued for $6000 from her former lawyer, Charles E. Ford. She says that he welshed on his promise to return the money she deposited with him.

Natural Gas Wholesalers Ask Rate Hike

Washington Area Firm Would Pay Largest Increase

By The Associated Press

The Power Commission said yesterday Atlantic Seaboard Corp. and Virginia Gas Transmission Corp., both of Charleston, W. Va., have asked permission to change their rates for wholesale natural gas service May 1.

The companies, members of the Columbia Gas System, plan an increase for several customers totaling about $701,000 a year based on anticipated sales for the 12 months ending April 30, 1951, and a reduction to several others of about $27,000 a year.

Largest Increase Here

The largest increase would be to Washington Gas Light Co., about $675,000 a year or 3.65 cents a thousand cubic feet of anticipated sales.

Atlantic Seaboard also informed the commission that if Virginia Gas Transmission is authorized to serve Commonwealth Natural Gas Corp., the proposed rate schedules would be amended to reduce the monthly billing demand 10 cents a thousand feet and the commodity charge one cent a thousand feet.

The commission was told that such a proposed revision probably would decrease the proposed increase to Washington Gas Light Co. by about $326,000 a year, resulting in an overall increase to Washington Gas Light of about $349,000 a year.

Others Affected

The new tariffs also would apply to:

1. Sales by Atlantic Seaboard to Consolidated Gas Electric Light and Power Co., Baltimore.

2. Sales by Virginia Gas Transmission to Charlottesville, Va., and to Roanoke Pipe Line Co., for resale to Roanoke Gas Co.

Sales for resale along the pipe line system operated by these companies, extending from Kentucky through West Virginia, Virginia and Maryland, are now made principally to Washington Gas Light Co., for service to the District of Columbia, and Consolidated Gas Electric Light and Power Co. of Baltimore.

The application to serve Commonwealth is being considered in a separate hearing now under way. Commonwealth proposes to build a pipe line to serve Virginia markets, including Richmond and Norfolk.

Corning Plan For Revising School Setup Is Presented

Board Committee To Study Proposal For a New System Of Administration

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A plan for reorganization of elementary school administration to assure "uniform standards and practices in all schools was taken under consideration yesterday by the Board of Education's committee on personnel.

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning presented the plan to committee members and asked them to hold it over for study.

The proposal must be considered by the committee and approved by the board before it can go into effect. Dr. Corning said the change could be made at the end of the current school year.

City-Wide Functions

The plan would end the present geographical administration of elementary schools. Divisional directors now assigned to administer the various regions would be given city-wide functions within white and Negro schools.

They would become directors of elementary education, with a Negro and white director of curriculum, two directors of supervision, two in charge of administration, and two others to head up special services for children.

Elementary principals now responsible to divisional directors would be given more authority and come directly under the supervision of the white and Negro associate superintendents in charge of elementary education.

Move For "Unification"

Dr. Corning told the committee that the reorganization would bring about "unification" of elementary school direction on the "policy level."

The new directors would work in the field, and be charged with the responsibility for improving instruction, he said.

The two directors in charge of curriculum would prepare and evaluate curriculum on the elementary level. Directors of supervision would guide the instructional program, and help teachers and principals, seeing that programs were up to standard.

Directors of administration would study population trends, determining where new elementary buildings are needed, evaluate physical plants from the educational point of view, assign facilities and equipment and do other administrative jobs.

Agreement Indicated

While committee members said they wanted time to study the superintendent's proposals they indicated general agreement. One recommendation, though, ran into immediate opposition and was turned back to Dr. Corning for further study.

Dr. Corning asked that small schools now directed by a teacher-in-charge be placed under control of a principal who already heads up another school. Four schools affected would be the Kenilworth, Military Road, Reno and Wilson Elementary Schools.

Personnel Committee Chairman Adelbert W. Lee said that previous experience showed it was unsatisfactory for a principal to administer two buildings.

Record $3.7 Million School Budget Asked in Arlington

Arlington County school officials have asked for a record $3,705,190 budget for 1950-51, involving a 20-cent increase in the school share of the tax rate.

The proposed budget, released yesterday, exceeds the current school year's budget by $755,190. It is based on a tax rate of $1.85 per $100 evaluation, instead of the present $1.65.

The suggested budget now goes before the school board, which set a public hearing for March 16 at 8 p.m. in the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School.

It then will go before the County Board March 27, when a public hearing has been slated on the over-all county budget for the coming year.

In disclosing that contemplated school operations call for a boost in the school tax on real estate, Superintendent William A. Early noted that despite the increase, the county's tax rate for schools still would be less than 80 percent of the average for the entire State in 1948-49.

More than half the proposed school budget—$1,097,950—will go for teacher salaries, according to a breakdown prepared by school officials.

Other costs will be distributed as follows: principals' salaries, 4.51 percent; other instruction costs, 6.53; operation and maintenance of buildings, 9.22; debt service (interest and repayment of principal), 11.10; improvement of buildings and grounds, 5.60; purchase of school buses, 1.82; administration, 1.28, and miscellaneous, 5.45.

The budget calls for hiring nearly 100 teachers, bringing their number to 631, in contrast to the 535 on school payrolls at the start of the current schol year.

It also proposes purchase of 15 buses for transportation of children at a cost of $67,500. The buses would be manned by five fulltime drivers and 10 part-time operators and would be used for educational trips while not operating on regularly scheduled trips.

Pupils who do not live within walking distance of their homes now use privately owned buses operating under a contract with the school board.

According to the proposal, $2,969,290 would come from local sources, including the real estate tax, delinquent taxes, miscellaneous fees and tuitions and an estimated surplus of $256,010 from the current budget. State grants would total $710,116; Federal payments in lieu of taxes would amount to $24,000, and $1784 would be transferred from the County Board's general fund.

Swimming Pool Bond Vote Asked in Arlington

Arlington's Democratic Club yesterday began circulating petitions asking Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy to call a special referendum on a proposal to float bonds for construction of "at least two" public swimming pools.

Leonard O. Hilder, president of the club, said 1000 names would be needed before the petitions can be presented to the court. He said the group decided to ask a special election instead of waiting for the general election next November because further delay would mean "the pools couldn't be built at least until the summer of 1952."

Under a legislative act adopted by the Virginia General Assembly at its current session, a ceiling of $500,000 would be applied to the bond issue. This, according to Hilder, would be sufficient for construction of two pools "and possibly a third."

The Democratic Club, which originally asked the county's legislative delegation to introduce the bill, suggested that one pool be constructed for white persons and a second for Negroes.

In the event of a favorable vote on the referendum, construction of the pools would be supervised by county officials, Hilder said.

Health Insurance To Be Opposed

The argument against national compulsory health insurance will be presented before the Landover Hills Citizens Association at 8 p. m. today in Landover Hills School auditorium.

Chief speaker will be Dr. Whitmer B. Firor, chairman of the coordinating committee and speakers bureau of the Maryland State Medical Society.

The affirmative side of compulsory health insurance will be given at the April meeting of the association.

Transfer of Cardozo Pupils To Go Before Board Today

The controversial proposal to transfer Central High School to use by Negro students now attending overcrowded Cardozo will be considered by the Board of Education's committee on buildings and grounds at 2 p. m. today. The full board will meet at 3:30 p. m.

Twelve prominent churchmen yesterday urged the board to provide relief for "the genuinely sad situation at Cardozo" out of the "abundance of facilities for white students."

The joint statement said there are 7500 vacant seats in eight white high schools, and 2000 more students than seats in Negro high schools.

The statement was prepared by Dr. Frederick Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches and signed by Dr. Seth Brooks, Universalist Church; Dr. Edward O. Clark, Chevy Chase Baptist Church; Dr. A. Powell Davies, All Souls Unitarian Church; Dr. Norman Gerstenfeld, Washington Hebrew Congregation; Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church; Dr. Carl Heath Kopf, First Congregational Church; Dr. Solomon Metz, Sholom Asch Congregation; Dr. DeWitt L. Miller, Washington City Church of the Brethren; Dr. Ralph K. Merker, clerk of the Washington City Presbytery; the Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, S. J., Catholic University; Dr. Orris J. Robinson, Calvary Methodist Church, and G. Howland Shaw, former Undersecretary of State.

Congressmen to See Crowded SE Schools

Two members of the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations considering the school budget are scheduled to take a trip into the Southeast area today to view overcrowded schools.

A group of parents will take Representatives Sidney R. Yates (D., Ill.) and Foster Furcolo (D., Mass.) to the white Congress Heights Elementary School, and the Negro Birney annex attended by junior high students.

The tour, which is to begin at 10 a. m. also will include sections of the Southeast where large apartment units are under construction.

The parent group will urge the Congressmen to support construction of two new white elementary schools and a Negro junior high school in the area.

Arlington Civic Federation Defers Vote on D. C. Home Rule

The Arlington County Civic Federation declined temporarily to take a stand on home rule for the District last night, voting 38 to 36 to postpone action on a resolution which would have indorsed the Kefauver proposal.

A motion to postpone a vote until next month was carried after the proposed resolution provoked a heated discussion on the home rule measure. A show of hands was called for after a voice vote failed to decide the issue.

Following introduction of the original resolution, Fred Bach, a federation delegate from the Ballston Citizens Association, voiced vigorous opposition to an indorsement by the Arlington group.

He charged that home rule would enable the District's Negro population to gain control of the city government and would force thousands of whites out of the District into nearby Maryland and Virginia.

His remarks brought a quick retort from Joseph Maltz, who said he was "ashamed of the previous speaker's statement." Maltz said he felt the Federation should quickly indorse any move designed to give an American the right to vote "regardless of his race or creed."

The proposal that the Federation indorse the Kefauver bill was made after Gerhard Van Arkel, general counsel for the Senate District Committee, told Federation members District home rule would eventually benefit Arlington.

Van Arkel predicted that District officials, "under the pressure of a public armed with votes" would be more awake to community problems and more willing to take the lead in cooperative efforts to settle problems of mutual concern to the entire greater Washington area.

A number of speakers vigorously debated the question of whether home rule in the District is of sufficient concern to Arlington to warrant a vote of indorsement by the federation.

Some newfangled machines were set up in the Capitol yesterday They take dictation and never miss, but can't count. Officials see them as one substitute for the bicycle, but they don't have wheels. What are they?

These machines enable Western Union to furnish facsimile transmission of telegrams in Washington and eight other cities.

You drop a telegram in a slot. A cylinder catches the paper and makes it go 'round and 'round. A beam of light scans the message, reading a strip one one-hundredth of an inch wide on each spin. Every strip the sending machine reads a receiving machine writes. After a two-minute whirl a clerk at the receiving machine tears off the completed facsimile message. It comes out in your own handwriting.

Five Installations Made

The clerk also counts the words. Then the message is sent by normal transmission to the addressee.

Five installations were set in operation on Capitol Hill yesterday. Speaker Rayburn signed the first message transmitted from the sender in a corridor of the House end of the Capitol.

The message was addressed "To Everybody" and said:

"More than a century ago Professor Morse sat within a few feet of this very spot and laboriously spelled out his famous message 'What hath God wrought?' Today I send you greetings by simply dropping this message into a slot of Western Union's ultra modern Telefax machine."

Operating in 9 Cities

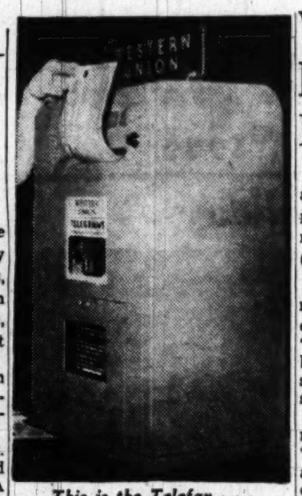
Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph, sent his message May 24, 1844, from the Supreme Court Room in the Capitol to Baltimore. The list of cities now having the Telefax machines omits Baltimore, but includes New York, Atlanta, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Houston, Dallas, Los Angeles and Cincinnati, and Washington.

In In the first two hours of operation, the telefax center where Rayburn wrote found business slow—two paid messages—but interest high—some 50 souvenir messages. A morning House hearing brought appeals from several Congressmen for an increase in the allowance for telegrams and telephones. It seems the $500 now allowed runs out too fast. Western members especially find that $500 doesn't make as many words go as far as the same amount does for Easterners. They'd like equality of service.

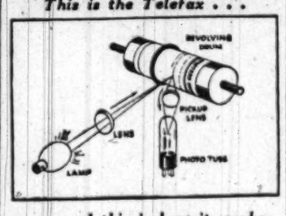
If they get it, watch those telefaxes whirl.

Oh, yes, about the bicycles—Western Union officials said they look on the machine as the local pickup and delivery service of tomorrow, not a city-to-city mechanism. In the three cities—New York, Atlanta, and San Francisco—where the machines have been installed for business firms, no charge for use of the machine is made—and telegrams sent through them are billed at standard rates.

For the service handled, an official conceded, the machines do replace the bicycle boy.



This is the Telefax . . .



. . . and this is how it works

Women Police Plan Studied In County

The use of uniformed women auxiliary police for school crossing patrols was taken under advisement yesterday by the Montgomery County Council.

The practice of detailing policemen for this purpose and for other special work was termed a "shocking depletion of manpower," by James H. Lake, chairman of a special committee of the county saftey board.

The prevalence of special assignments creates situations wherein "not a single patrol car is available during several hours each day," Lake asserted.

The council studied a plan in use at present in Louisville, Ky., under which uniformed women auxiliaries safeguard school crossings during school hours.

Council president Frederic P. Lee ordered distribution of an FBI pamphlet describing the Louisville plan to parent-teacher groups for study and recommendation.

"The county police division is riding for a fall," Lake warned. He pointed to the "excellent public relations" engendered by the response to "almost all the demands for special services," but added that these services can lead to "the point where the police neglect their fundamental duties to enforce the law."

Lake's committee, originally appointed to determined the feasibility of one-man patrol cars, recommended their continuance generally.

The change from two-man to one-man patrol cars on day shifts was ordered last August by County Manager Irving G. McNayr for a six months' trial period.

Criticism of the order by Police Chief Charles M. Orme to the effect that it would spread police protection too thinly led to his suspension by McNayr. Subsequently, the chief was reinstated after he apologized for his criticism.

The committee recommended use of the one-man cars on day shifts in the Bethesda and Silver Spring districts and "discretionary" daytime use in Rockville for the present.

Ultimately, following institution of other recommendations, the committee urged full use during the day in Rockville and on all shifts but the midnight-to-8 a. m. shift in the two other districts.

Fire Damages Three Stores On 18th St. NW.

Several thousand dollars' damage was caused yesterday by a fire in the rear of three stores at 1170-1172 and 1174 18th st. nw.

Fire Department officials said the blaze apparently started in an areaway behind the stores, where several oil drums were stored. With the fire brought under control quickly, none of the stores was forced to close.

The places of business were the Mastercraft Shoe Repairing Shop at 1174, Jack's Lock and Key Shop at 1172 and William H. Turton builders, 1170 18th st. nw.

A fire which started on the first floor damaged offices early yesterday at 1304 I st. nw. Firemen fought the blaze from 3:48 to 6 a.m. The first floor is occupied by a barber and beauty shop.

Two Youths Charged With Housebreaking

A "fallen" policeman almost lost a young housebreaking suspect early yesterday, but it eventually turned out all right for the department's honor.

Shortly after midnight, an alarm went out for an attempted housebreaking in progress at Kline's liquor store, 201 H st. nw.

Detective Sergt. William Shelton responded and collared two 17-year-olds who were trying, police said, to get into the store via the skylight.

Shortly thereafter Pvts. J. B. Gilbert and Lurty C. Houff arrived, and Shelton turned over one of the juveniles to Houff.

But Houff, leading his prisoner to a scout car, dropped into a window well, a space around a basement window. Houff's captive simply kept on going.

Shelton, one prisoner in tow, recollared the second youth with his free hand.

No. 1 Precinct held both youngsters for Juvenile Court action. Houff was detained "in good condition" at Emergency Hospital with a possible fracture of the right ankle and hip injuries.

Store officials said the only property damage was a cracked skylight.

Elderly Prove Poor Drivers, Survey Shows

Drivers over 65 are far more dangerous than teen-age drivers, a traffic department survey completed yesterday seemed to indicate.

The survey, covering the last quarter of 1949, showed that teen-age drivers here hold about 5.3 percent of the permits and were involved in 9.6 percent of the accidents.

By comparison, drivers over 65 hold less than one-half percent of the permits and were involved in more than 3 percent of the accidents.

The survey was disclosed by George E. Keneipp, director of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, at a luncheon meeting in the Mayflower Hotel of the D. C. advisory board of the American Automobile Association.

Keneipp recalled that when he proposed some time ago that all drivers be reexamined when they reach age 65 he was deluged with letters in which everyone over 65 opposed the idea. The survey would seem to indicate good reason behind the proposal, he said.

Among suggestions Keneipp offered in his luncheon talk was that physicians be required to report cases of epileptics to the Health Department, the information to be made available to the traffic department.

To cut down rush-hour parking violations Keneipp also suggested that minimum collateral in such cases be raised to $10 from the present $3.

When the Council heard this, it sent Police Chief John W. Wise to roundup the hackers. That done, the Council warned the drivers to cease and desist, or the parking privilege would be taken away.

Facing Adjustments to New Community, Bride Anticipated No Difficulties, But Now After Three Months' Marriage She Feels Heartsick

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three months ago I was married to a young man whom I had known for more than a year and we moved to his home town, not many miles from my neighborhood. I realized this would necessitate adjustments for me, to a different church, new friends, etc., and I thought I was ready to make these adjustments, but I find myself heartsick most of the time.

Not a day passes that I don't wish I could turn back the calendar and know my husband as a boy friend again. I don't wish he were someone else, just that we were back where we were a year ago. I could cry when I glance at our wedding picture, and I wish our honeymoon trip was still ahead, instead of just a memory. It is as though I had lost something that would never return again.

I have no near neighbors and do feel some fear of being so alone, but that doesn't explain why I keep thinking back to the good times Ted and I had together before we married. There isn't much money but we have good times with other couples in the community and there are many social activities in which we both participate, so I cannot explain my loneliness.

Misses Old Friends, Her Job

I FIND myself wishing I were back in my old job, and I wonder what the girls are doing. I wonder, too, if my husband is silently unhappy also, not free to come and go as he pleases, unable to call his time and money his own. But I hesitate to mention it, because I sincerely feel he is doing all in his power to make our marriage easy for me.

Will these feelings pass in the coming months, or can something be done by me or my husband to combat them? E. G.

Like Cinderella the Morning After

DEAR E. G.: In effect you complain that there is a vast difference between (1) the way you actually feel and (2) the way you had expected to feel in marriage. As I get the picture, you are sober again in a forlorn way, after an exhilarating emotional jag, an intoxication of excitement that lasted all during the rosy days of prenuptial anticipation and honeymoon vacation.

In reaction to a nice boy's court, you took off into a world of dreams, enchanted with yourself as a heroine of great importance, about whom a "new and wonderful" love story was taking form. But now at the end of Chapter 1 you find yourself back to earth, on the outskirts of a somewhat unfamiliar town, with a daily routine of housework to do, and with a feeling of having lost something very beautiful—as Cinderella may have felt too, the morning after her first ride in the pumpkin coach.

It is perfectly true that experience already transpired will not return again. But that's no loss, provided one retains the capacity to improve upon one's past experience, as people always do if they accept reality in a spirit of "live and learn." If you have a notion that your love of Ted is less than it was, you are mistaken. Up to now, you haven't begun to love him really. He has been simply leading man in your drama of self-glorification.

Intimacy of Mind Cures Loneliness

PSYCHOLOGICALLY you are a child bride, lonely for home and mother, for girl friends and sister. Intimacy of discussion about soul-felt matters, which is the leaven that makes a whole loaf of marriage, hasn't begun to develop between you and your husband as yet. It seems to me you are wasting a grand opportunity to start it germinating, when you don't weep on his chest about your woeful nostalgia for the good old days (of a few months ago!) and ask if he feels the same or are you being silly.

From this sincere gesture of spiritual closeness, which affords him the role of confidante and comforter, you may pave the way towards deepening sympathy in the relationship—and it is this pitch of unity that banishes loneliness. But be prepared before you speak to listen as generously to his laments (if any) as you would wish him to listen to yours. Open kindliness on touchy subjects in times of stress is a practice vital to the growth and maintenance of wholesome married love. M. H.

China-Painting, Sport of the Nineties, Comes Back in Style; but Now You Can Bake Plates in Your Own Oven

DECORATING china with a new paint that doesn't require kiln-firing is intriguing home-makers nowadays.

From Mrs. J. R. Rafferty, 1209 South Thomas st., Arlington, comes the following:

DEAR ANNE:

Could you tell me where I can get a course in hand painting of china and other pottery using the new paint I have seen advertised lately? I would like very much to take the course somewhere in Arlington since that is where I live.

DEAR MRS. RAFFERTY:

There's a class starting soon that exactly fits the bill! It's at Arlington Recreation Center, 3700 Lee hwy. Beginning March 14, the class will meet on Tuesday from 2 to 4 p. m. They're going to use the new paint that can be baked on right in your own kitchen oven, instead of in a kiln. For more information, call Oxford 2228.

DEAR ANNE:

Sometime ago, I heard that a cottage cheese pie is a very tasty dish. If you have the recipe will you print it? M. W.
Washington

DEAR M. W.:

The recipe follows:

Cottage Cheese Pie

1 cup sugar	3 tablespoons flour
¼ cup cream	1 teaspoon vanilla (or 2½ tablespoons lemon juice and 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind)
2 pounds (3 pints) smooth cottage cheese
4 beaten egg yolks	4 egg whites
¼ teaspoon salt

Dissolve sugar in cream. Add cottage cheese. (Rub through sieve if it is not smooth. If cheese is dry, use ½ cup cream instead of ¼.)

Add egg yolks, flour, vanilla or lemon. Put salt in egg whites and whip until they are stiff. Fold into cheese mixture. Pour into crumb crust in oven-proof baking dish and sprinkle more of crumb mixture over top. Pie should be about 1½ inches deep.

CRUMB CRUST: Crush or grind until very fine 1½ cups graham crackers or zwieback crumbs. Stir into them ¼ cup confectioner's sugar, 6 tablespoons melted butter, and 1 teaspoon cinnamon (optional).

Reserve ½ cupful of this mixture for top of pie. Place remainder in deep pie pan or baking dish and pat firmly to sides and bottom with palm of hand. Chill crust thoroughly (it may be prepared long in advance) before pouring in filling. Of if you haven't time to chill crust, bake in 375-degree oven 15 minutes.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me any way of restoring washable white pigskin gloves to their original whiteness? They are slightly yellow from numerous washings.
D. J.
Washington

DEAR D. J.:

I'm afraid there's nothing you can use on these gloves at home to restore them to their pristine state. Such work is done professionally. However, I haven't found a local place that takes gloves for this treatment.

DEAR ANNE:

I have a christening dress made of rayon material trimmed with lace that has been packed away in a box for about four years. It has become quite yellow and washing in mild soap and hanging in the sun didn't help its appearance. Could you suggest something to whiten it?
F. G. T.

DEAR F. G. T.:

You can whiten the christening robe with a mild bleach, such as sodium perborate. Mix four tablespoons of it with a pint of soapy water and let the little garment soak half an hour. Then wash thoroughly in suds and rinse. Repeat if necessary.

Fairfax, Va.

DEAR ANNE,

I have two pairs of shoes, neither my correct size and each worn about a dozen times, which take up precious space in my one crowded closet. Can you tell me if there is some charitable organization which could make use of these shoes? I recall that CARE was greatly in need of worn shoes some time ago, but I do not know if that need exists at present. "READER."

The Unitarian Church, at 16th and Harvard sts., collects used clothing in good condition for shipment overseas to displaced persons and others in need. The shoes would be welcomed there; workers are on hand to receive donations all day, every week day. Actually, CARE as an organization has never handled used clothing, although individual workers have frequently taken the trouble to collect and pack bundles for needy European families whose needs were known to them. At present, no one at the CARE office reports a demand for women's footwear.

DEAR ANNE:

I have been watching with interest the replies to L. W. H. on supplies suggested to take to England. I feel I must add that any American fond of American-made (and tasting) coffee better stock up from here, even with large packages of instant coffee. (I have seen some in tin—lightweight and sealed.)

Also—fresh fruit is at a premium, preserved almost as much so, with small variation. And what is breakfast without at least canned tomato juice or apricot or pineapple juice when fresh citrus is quite unavailable—and always expensive?

Telephone Blues Haunt Busy Mother

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

IT WOULD seem that the moment Mother finds a breathing space in her day and sits down to phone one of her friends, her children converge on her as if drawn by magnets.

"Mother," in a loud whisper from Betsy, "Mary Jane wants me to come out and play. Do I HAVE to wear my heavy coat?"

Mother nods vigorously, keeping one ear to the receiver and listening to her daughter with the other.

"Can I have a nickel from my next week's allowance. I need it."

"Please, please . . . I can't decide that now."

Then comes Junior all out of breath. "Mom, where's my baseball? I looked in the basement but it isn't there. Did you see it?"

"I saw it in the basement—and can't you see I'm trying to talk over the phone?"

"But, Mom, I have to have it. The fellows are waiting. Where could it be?"

"Please Meg, excuse me a second while I find Junior's baseball" ——

That settled, in comes the little fellow, who for the last half hour has been placidly riding his tricycle up and down the driveway.

"I wanna talk to Grandma."

"But this isn't Grandma, it's Mrs. Toohey and Mother wants to talk to her."

"I wanna say hello."

Well, it's a universal problem as any mother knows, or anyone who tries to talk to a mother.

One mother discovered that she was free to talk when she allowed the child to talk first. Another bought a play phone and suggested the child use it while she used hers. It worked fine as long as she talked for he repeated her every word. When she listened he said, "Talk, Mommy," but it gave her some relief from his constant demands. It was pleasanter to talk than to be unable to do so.

Great-Granny's Pantaloons Are Back

Paris Likes Legs, Both Covered and Uncovered

By Peggy Preston

PANTALOONS peeping from beneath a tulle evening skirt . . . slim suit skirts stopping just below the knee . . . flaring bell sleeves attached to dropped shoulder seams, or no sleeves at all . . . natural waistlines and wide shoulder straps on formal gowns.

Such is the Paris fashion picture for spring as revealed in Washington's newest group of imports shown yesterday by Julius Garfinckel & Co. And a reassuring one it is, too. Especially if you've been dreading the return of the vogues of the '20s. For, while the flapper touches are in there bidding for attention, they don't hold the upper hand. At least not in the 22 originals which Miss Elizabeth Fairall has just brought back to this country from France.

"Paris designers are divided on the matter," explained Miss Fairfall. "Balmain is the champion of the movement to bring back the styles of the '20s, but he is interpreting them in new ways.

Dior is in the opposite camp. Jacques Fath, like a mischievous boy, plays with the ideas of 25 years ago and creates some of the cleverest clothes in Paris."

Hemline Back Where It Started

ALL THE PARIS stylists are agreed on one point, however. They've put the hemline up near the kneecap, almost to where it was when the L-85 rule held sway during the war. It is a style detail that even invades the evening gown division, and every designer includes at least one very short evening dress in a collection. They are also in accord on where to put the waistline—right where nature intended it to go, at the waist.

How they've handled the short skirts is the most interesting feature of the new Paris imports. Dior has worked magic with folds, pleats and panels that lend softness to the stark, slim silhouette.

Jean Desses puts a pleated floating panel on a beige wool jersey to ease the straight lines of the skirt, and Balmain adds "swallow" flaps to the back of a black silk cocktail dress.

Fath is represented by four costumes in the Garfinckel group of imports, and all of them are novel and amusing. A short white evening dress of tucked chiffon has wide shoulder straps and fitted bodice. Surprise detail are two floor-length panels of floating chiffon which trail from the front of the waistline.

Evening Gowns Stand Out

AS IS customary in all French fashion collections, the daytime dresses and suits are subdued in color and type of fabric, while the cocktail and evening gowns are vivid and daring. Handsomest of the gowns in this latter division is by Desses and fashioned in the traditional boufant manner. But in color and fabric it is outstanding, being made of pink faille and gray satin reversible cloth with a tremendous overskirt of gray and pink tulle. Dior does a short formal gown of white silk taffeta, covered with 'fibrane guipure' which looked to us like straw lace. A green slipper satin by Fath is also outstanding.

But for sheer whimsy, Balenciaga's afternoon and evening frocks with pantaloons take the prize. One is of white tulle, with a great, sweeping shirt that touches the floor in back and is short in front. Underneath are pantaloons of silver lame, trimmed with bands lavishly embroidered in jewel-like stones.

Also included in the collection are a trim navy suit by Schiaparelli, and a navy fitted coat with kimono sleeves by Molyneux.

Dimitri Wolkonsky

BORROWING a short evening skirt from the 1920's, Jacques Fath adds floor length floating panels to create a distinctive 1950 gown. Horizontal tucking on white chiffon of dress is novel contrast to free-flowing panels which fall from the front of the waistline

SLEEVES make news in the navy blue wool suit pictured at the right, from the spring collection of Jacques Fath. Made of white pleated handkerchief linen they spring from a dropped shoulder seam in the approved Paris manner. Both Fath designs are from the group of 22 imports shown yesterday by Julius Garfinckel & Co.

Jobe Says...

And Now It's The Dressy Flat!

The flat or low heeled shoes that are so enormously popular in casual shoes and plain pumps have now gone dressy too. For they are so comfortable that the girl who is used to wearing them is reluctant to give them up even when she must dress up.

So this spring there are a lot of wonderful new dressy flats—with the thin stripling shoe out in front as the fashion leader. It looks particularly new and smart in black patent leather which you can wear with everything from prints to black sheer cocktail dresses.

PARRY-PHRASING

Everybody Toots the Boys Club Horn—Including Boys

By Ellen Buell Parry

By Ellen Buell Parry

PLAYING a trombone almost as tall as he is, 10-year-old Walter Smith of Arlington will be soloist at the Boys' Club of Washington's third annual band concert at Constitution Hall tomorrow evening.

Walter is only one of 65 talented young musicians in the club band. Paul Lavalle, conductor of the Cities Service Band, is coming down from New York to act as guest conductor for the boys. Mrs. Harry S. Truman is honorary chairman of the concert.

Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, James McDonnell Shea, Mr. and Mrs. Lee D. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Milton W. King, Col. and Mrs. Robert H. Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Gardella, Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, Dr. Paul Van Natta, Egon Wolfe and Mr. and Mrs. F. Henry Jones are among those who have taken boxes.

WALTER SMITH

ONE USUALLY thinks of the Boys' Club as offering athletic opportunities to boys; comparatively few know of the musical program. The club has been operating 64 years, but not until 1940 were a group of youngsters and one music teacher brought together to form a musical organization that has evolved into the highly integrated, accomplished Boys' Club of Washington Band. The club's music school, with an enrollment of more than 200, now maintains a junior band, a junior orchestra, a senior band, a concert band, a harmonica aggregation and an accordion unit.

To start with, the club lends the boys instruments, so that parents may find out whether their kids really have a talent before attempting to buy expensive instruments for them. If a boy has talent, lessons, at $1 each, are offered by eight experienced instructors, most of whom are retired members of the United States Army, Navy or Marine Bands, or former members of the National Symphony Orchestra.

If the boy can't afford $1, arrangements are made for free lessons by this Community Chest supported organization. The Optimist Club furnishes uniforms for the boys.

TWELVE MEN who received their start through participation in the Boys' Club of Washington music program are now members of nationally known bands, six others are music instructors in large universities,

Sponsors of the Boys' Club hope Washingtonians in droves will take themselves down to Constitution Hall tomorrow evening to give these kids wholehearted support. As Horace Heidt says, "It is better to be a maker of boys than a mender of men."

Some Changes Made in Woodbury Blair House

By Marie McNair

MR. AND MRS. LOUIS BRUGUIERE, settled at last in the home they bought more than a year ago, are asking small groups of friends to see the new look on the old Woodbury Blair house on New Hampshire ave.

This English-basement style house with double drawing rooms on the second floor has been completely renovated and is furnished with the Brugieres' priceless pieces. They're particularly proud of their paintings including a Canaletto which hangs in the library.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruguiere—he's Henri Le Grand to his friends—are newcomers to the Capital scene. Wakehurst at Newport is where they will spend long summer months, coming to Washington for "the season." Their marriage two years ago was something of a surprise to New York and Newport friends.

Mrs. Bruguiere, the former Mrs. James Laurens Van Alen, is a niece of the late Frederick W. Vanderbilt, and as Daisy Post was a belle in her New York debutante days. Mr. Vanderbilt's favorite niece and his close companion in his later years, Mrs. Brugiere inherited the 700-acre Vanderbilt estate at Hyde Park, N. Y., more than 10 years ago, along with her uncle's Fifth ave. townhouse. In the 50-room Greco-Corinthian mansion overlooking the Hudson, was a fortune in furniture and draperies from the honeymoon Malmaison Palace of Napoleon and Josephine.

Mrs. Brugiere's daughter, now Mrs. Alexander Saunderson, had the distinction of being married to two dashing Georgian Princes. Her first husband was Alexis Mdivani, from whom she was divorced; her second, his brother Serge, who left her a widow.

Connally, Mrs. J. Howard McGrath, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. John W. Snyder, Mrs. Leslie Biddle, Mrs. Gordon Gray, Mrs. Max Gardner, Mrs. Estes Kefauver, Mrs. Brien McMahon, Mrs. John Steelman, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

The 48 States will outdo themselves decorating their tables with objects most symbolic of each, hoping to get a prize.

Tea Cups Tinkle Instead of Glasses

TEA CUPS, not cocktail glasses, will tinkle this afternoon as the Mayflower Lounge inaugurates the tea hour from 4 to 6. Sidney will play teatime music as groups gather to sip the steaming brew.

Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, will be the guest of Mrs. Walter F. George, who will also have as guests, Mrs. Lister Hill and Mrs. Jeff Busby.

Senora de Berckemeyer, wife of the Peruvian Ambassador, has been asked to join Mrs. Hamilton Lamar, whose other guests will include Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Princess Elizabeth of Hesse, Mrs. B. Powell Harrison, Mrs. Louis A. de Cazenove, Mrs. Arthur Doig, Mrs. Samuel Reber, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin.

Mrs. Jess Bryan Bennett entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home in Georgetown.

Her guests included Senora de la Colina, Miss Carolina Nabuco, Mrs. John R. Steelman, Mrs. A. C. McAuliffe, Mrs. Robert L. Walsh, Mrs. Clark W. Thompson Mrs. Robert Guggenheim and Mrs. Thomas Burke.

Surprise Birthday Party for Doctor

MRS. TOMAS CAJIGAS entertained at a surprise dinner party last evening to celebrate the birthdays of her husband, Dr. Cajigas, and Admiral Clark Woodward.

Among those who came bearing gifts were the Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen, Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister; the visiting Governor of Puerto Rico and Mrs. Munoz Marin, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. Ellen Woodward, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, Mr. and Mrs. Lisle Smith, Mrs. James I. McCallum of Ventnor, N. J., Group Capt. and Mrs. L. J. Birchall and Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Bartelt.

Dr. Tomas Robert Cajigas flew in from Detroit for his father's birthday.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

Fiesta Week festival in the Old New Orleans Latin Quarter is a fast moving, glamorous Latin show—and it's teeming with genuine Latin talent.

Here for a month, (don't be misled by a mere title,) are Los Chicanos—two Chilean brothers and their sister—on their first North American appearance. They have many talents. The girl, Lupe, has a beautiful voice for her native chants and songs. Brother Pepe is a drummer, Chico plays the piano, They all dance the usual South American steps and throw in a few folk dances for color.

Another dancer, Carmen, does the flamenco and other steps native to her country, Cuba, and Spain. All are in vivid costumes.

Laurels go to Daryl Harpa for direction of the show. He's quite a showman. His rhumba band, which has been in the Latin Quarter since it's been open, frequently includes a show unit, when on tour.

"The Birth of the Rhumba," a number in which Harpa's running commentary introduces curious, unfamiliar instruments, has been Latin Quarter fare for some time. Now the band leader has built up the theme to include dances and songs which he introduced on a "tour of the Latin countries." Marna Paige, the featured vocalist, brings the show to a close with some peppy songs.

THE Sheraton Hotel has been sold to the Albert Pick chain; from now on "The Lee House" is the answer you'll get on the telephone there. The Sheraton Lounge has been changed to the Capitol Room—appropriate enough with the many murals of the city on its walls. Douglass Boone, manager, is unable to say what the future of the glass skirts on the waitresses will be. It's strictly a Sheraton chain idea, used in many of their hotels. New entertainment consists of Ruth Arden at the piano and organ.

MICHEL has a Thursday night bargain dinner which sounds quite special. His Hungarian paprika beef goulash has been cut in price to $1.25 on those nights—almost half it's usual cost.

This is the sort of dish Chef Cristol goes all out on, with spices and wines to point up the potatoes, vegetables and beef. Served with the dinner will be an appetizer, salad, dessert, and beverage.

Sesqui Group Ups Theater Cost $100,000

The Sesqui Commission's executive committee yesterday voted to spend an additional $100,000 on the Rock Creek Park amphitheater rather than cut down plans because of unexpectedly high bids.

Carter T. Barron, executive vice chairman of the commission, said the group decided original plans should be followed for the 4000-seat open-air theater since it is the only permanent Sesqui building now planned. Original estimates were that it could be built for around $400,000.

The committee heard a report on the still inconclusive search for a new site for the 1951-52 Freedom Fair. Paul M. Massmann, the Sesqui's new general manager, yesterday toured several possible sites. He hopes to have a recommendation ready for a full Sesqui Commission meeting, probably next week.

Yugoslav Claims Bill Is Approved by House

The House completed congressional action yesterday on a bill establishing machinery to pay American claims for property taken over by Yugoslavia's Communist regime during its nationalization program.

It voted 209 to 165 to accept a joint House-Senate conference report on the bill. The measure already had been approved by the Senate. It now goes to the White House for President Truman's signature.

Gianninis to Oppose Bank Holding Firm Bill

Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) said today officials of the Giannini West Coast banking empire are expected to appear in opposition to legislation to regulate bank holding companies on March 15.

Maybank's Senate Banking Committee resumes hearings then. He said officials of Transamerica Corp., holding company for Bank of America headed by L. M. Giannini, have "indicated" they will want time to testify.

Rent Control Hearing In Week of April 24

The Senate banking committee yesterday scheduled the week of April 24 for hearings on a bill to extend rent controls for one year beyond June 30, 1950.

The committee, or one of its subcommittees, will hold hearings the same week on a bill introduced by Senator Green (D., R. I.) to repeal the Silver Purchase Act.

Wealth or Health?

They say the wealthy businessman . . . has ulcers quite severe . . . And nothing short of greater wealth . . . Can bring him any cheer . . . And yet when he has reached the height . . . Of glory and success . . . He still is looking everywhere . . . For health and happiness . . . Well, he can have his progress and . . . The pleasure of his fame . . . And all the painful ulcers of . . . His money-making game . . . But I would rather take my time . . . And always feel all right . . . And have a share of daily fun . . . To keep my troubles light . . . For how am I to profit by . . . The luxury of wealth . . . If I must suffer in my mind . . . And sacrific my health?

Our Miss Carper Hits The Jackpot

Post Reporter Elsie Carper made a call from a pay telephone, and got a busy signal.

Hanging up the receiver, she waited for her nickel to be returned. But the expected "clunk" didn't materialize.

Probing up into the coin return slot, Elsie came upon a wad of cloth stuffed into the opening. She pulled it out, and was rewarded with a shower of 19 nickels.

Early returns from the Greek election showed streng Communist support for John Sophianopoulos, but later tabulations left him trailing the field.

Mr. Sophianopoulos' defeat is being hailed by democratic factions in Greece and by headline writers on American newspapers.

FOR GIN RUMMY PLAYERS ONLY

When it was time for gin rummy at a friend's house the other night, two men quickly paired off for a private game.

"Grudge match?" I asked the host.

He nodded. "Two tightest players in America," he explained. "Neither has ever been known to discard anything less than a five-spot.

"As a matter of fact, they played here about two weeks ago and finished four Hollywoods before they discovered there were two kings missing from the deck."

MISCELLANY

The other day I had a vagrant thought about the second hand on a watch, and wondered which was the first and which the third. J. C. Runyon of 503 N. West st., Falls Church, Va., informs me that the first hand is the second hand. He can tell, because the second hand is the minute hand and the third hand works by the hour . . . "Big Sister Sheila" agrees with Ruth Cochran that it's a shame WOOK discontinued its Kiddie Korner program, but slyly adds that disappointed kids and their mothers are invited to listen to "Big Sister Sheila's Story Time" on WCFM, 5:45 p. m. weekdays . . . And speaking of FM stations, have you noticed the line-up of Armed Service bands on WASH-FM? Mondays it's the Air Force Band, Tuesdays the Marine Band, Wednesdays the Army Band, Thursdays the Naval Academy Band piped in from Annapolis and Fridays the Navy Band. It's 97.1 on the FM dial; the time is 8:30 p. m. . . . Our story about the lady who hailed a cab and gave chase to the streetcar on which she had left her purse has produced results. Claude E. Glass of 1785 Lanier pl. nw. identifies himself as the hacker who didn't get paid, but adds: "She's welcome to keep the 30 cents; I was glad to be able to help her recover the purse. Besides, breaking into the District Line—involuntarily at that—is compensation enough" . . . Okay, Eagle Cab No. 26, it's a pleasure to have you aboard . . . George W. Gourlay of 97 Galveton st. sw. reports that when his Give-Away item (puppy) appeared here, he got 94 calls in 6 hours. He wants to know if that's a record. The answer is "no." Joe Short of the Baltimore Sun's Washington Bureau counted 100 calls before he left his receiver off the hook in self-defense, and he wouldn't talk to me for two days afterward because the calls started to come in at 6 a. m.

JOHN L., THE CHAMP

M. O. Coleman of 520 7th st. se. wonders whether John L. Lewis is even more powerful than we suspected. He writes:

"When John's boys went out on strike, the weather turned cold. When Mr. Lewis called them back to the pits, the weather turned warm again. What is this? Does the man control the weather, too?"

I wouldn't be surprised. Rainmakers and witch doctors are probably eligible for membership in John's "District 50."

BATTLE OF THE SEXES

The other day I ran a little jingle by Pop Grey, in which he said if you think you're married to the champion talker, drop in at his house and meet his wife. Jess Veihmeyer of 307 34th pl. ne., who also has an understanding missus with a good sense of humor, writes:

I refuse to concede the championship
Until Pop's heard my Buttercup;
For if he really has the champion
Then, sir, I've got the runner-up.

Mrs. R. L. Clinkenbeard of 3525 Davenport st. nw. takes a tolerant view of these male jokesters, and replies with:

Oh, these menfolks of ours just must complain;
They belittle us all our lives.
But God bless 'em and keep 'em as they are,
'Cause we're lucky to be their wives.

U. S. Moves in On Tax Frauds

By Drew Pearson

It looks as if the United States attorneys, some of them hitherto phlegmatic about prosecuting income-tax frauds, were now getting to work.

Pearson

On January 20 this column published the sordid details of a hold-up scheme by which five Internal Revenue agents in New York City shook down Federal taxpayers who either had violated the tax laws, or else wanted to avoid tax argument.

The column cited dates, names and places regarding these shakedowns, and raised the question as to why this type of fraud had not been prosecuted. One of those named, incidentally, was William A. Ganey, chief of the fraud squad of New York's third Internal Revenue collection district, and a friend of certain high-up Democratic politicians.

Finally, on March 3, six weeks after the column expose, the five men were indicted.

Acheson Passes

A tall man with an elegant mustache and a soft, cultured voice went through a special variety of hell in a tiny, smoke-filled Senate room the other day.

His agony was there for the world to watch. Glaring cameras stared at him. Reporters scribbled notes. Hostile words picked at him savagely. No tempers flared or voices raised. It was very polite and very, very deadly.

Dean Acheson, the Secretary of State, sat before the mighty Senate Appropriations Committee and an intent audience.

The test began when urbane Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire casually asked: "Mr. Secretary, what do you consider a security risk?" Everyone in the room knew Bridges' "security risk" was Alger Hiss. An Assistant Secretary of State looked anxiously at his boss. Acheson's expression was a be-nice-to-Senators look, but his voice was cold as he answered: "We have regulations on this matter."

Minutes later, Bridges was back again with a smooth "Would you say that a friend of a known Communist would be a security risk?"

"Yes," the Secretary said, quietly, "I think probably so." He parried the thrust and was on guard again for the next one.

"Would you say a friend of a person who is a member of a Communist front organization would be a security risk?"

The audience was watching with awed fascination. Would the Secretary of State fall into the trap? This was a game for keeps. Acheson, still in the low, cool voice, said, "It all depends on whether the person would know what his friend was up to."

Senator Bridges was playing the role of the charming lawyer trying to draw the witness out. The roomful was waiting for him to say those two words, "Alger Hiss." But the Senator was not ready yet. There followed more smoothly probing questions and cautious replies.

Then Bridges said, smiling pleasantly, "Would you say a person who is known, for instance, to have given material from the State Department classified files in defense of Alger Hiss would be a security risk?"

A ripple of ohs and ahs passed across the tiny chamber. The words were out.

"Anyone who dealt with classified material in an unauthorized way is a security risk," Acheson said firmly.

A few minutes later, he was reading a statement on Hiss. But his voice no longer had that stiff, edgy quality, and when he finished, there was a hush in the room, as Acheson waited for the verdict. It came from Chairman Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee: "Well, gentlemen," he croaked, "we'll let the Secretary go. He's a busy man."

Not a voice was raised in protest. Secretary Acheson had passed his trial.

Truman Slams Door—It happened some time ago, but it's still significant that the President had a meeting with Georgia's Senator Dick Russell, the shrewd Southern leader, about compromising on the civil-rights fight. Russell figured Southern Senators would yield on some things if the Administration would sidetrack a vote on the dynamite-laden Fair Employment Practices Act. Truman was cordial but tenacious. "I won't even talk to you about civil rights, Dick," he said. "I've got a program and I'm not going to back down an inch."
